Secrets from the Field

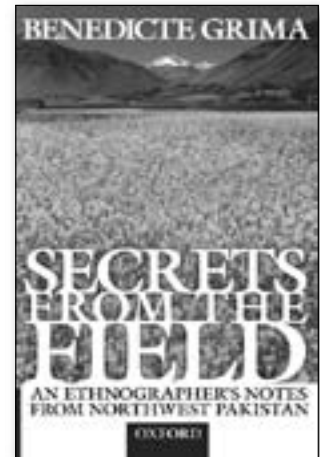

An Ethnographer's Notes from Northwest Pakistan

Benedicte Grima

This is a personal account of an American woman who lived and worked among Afghan refugees and tribal Pakistani Pashtuns in Northwest Pakistan. Benedicte Grima's first visit to this region was in 1979 when she drove from Paris. During her subsequent visits, she travelled extensively and developed meaningful connections with the people. She immersed herself in their world to provide a sensitive portrayal of a region which has recently gained significance in the West.

ISBN: 978-0-19-547164-9, Rs 250

Pilgrims of Love

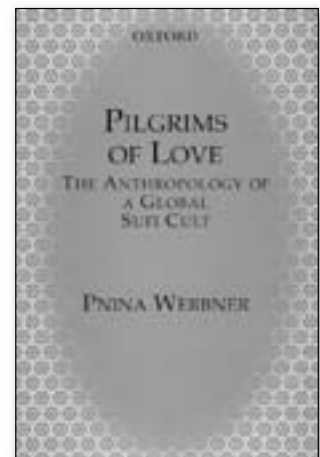

The Anthropology of a Global Sufi Cult

Pnina Werbner

Werbner's book traces the development of a Sufi Naqshbandi order which originated in Pakistan and has extended to Britain, Europe, the Middle East, and Southern Africa. Drawing on twelve years of fieldwork, she explains the complex organization of Sufi orders as regional and transnational cults, and examines how such cults are manifested through ritual and embodied in sacred mythology and global diasporas.

2005, 364 pages, 216x138mm, Hardback

ISBN: 978-0-19-597985-5, Rs 550

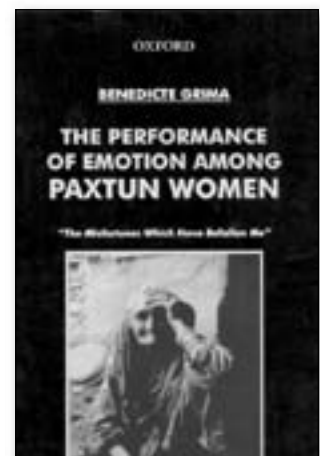

The Performance of Emotion among Paxtun Women

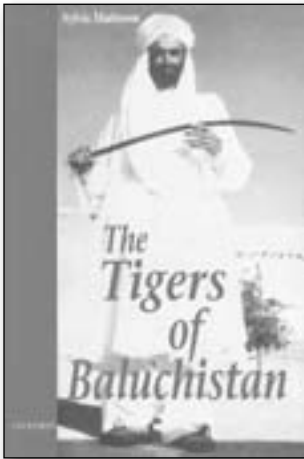

Benedicte Grima

Based on her extensive experiences of tribal life in Pakistan and Afghanistan, the author describes a ritual which provides Paxtun women with an outlet for their emotions. The author's access to different levels of Paxtun society enables her to express the diverse ways in which this ritual is performed throughout the Paxtun culture.

2004, 240 pages, 216x138mm, Hardback

ISBN: 978-0-19-597881-0, Rs 350

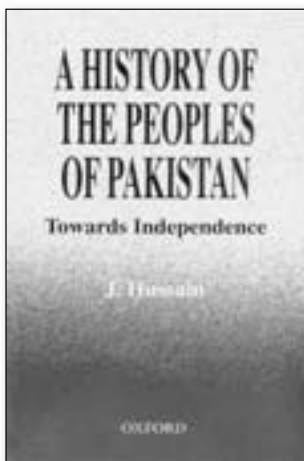

The Tigers of Baluchistan

Sylvia Matheson

For five years, the author lived among the Bugtis, traditionally known as the tigers of Baluchistan, who are one of the most distinguished Baluch tribes of Pakistan. She travelled extensively in remote parts of tribal territory, sharing a tough primitive way of life unchanged for centuries and recording it on tape, cine, and still films. The result is a fascinating and very vivid eyewitness account of how the Bugtis are dealing with their sudden confrontation with twentieth century industrialization, following the discovery and development of Asia's largest natural gas field inside their area.

1997, 242 pages, 216x138mm, Hardback

ISBN: 978-0-19-577763-5, Rs 350

A History of the Peoples of Pakistan Towards Independence

Jane Hussain

An exhaustive anthropological work on the peoples of Pakistan from the lost historic civilizations, right up to the creation of Pakistan in 1947. This work also covers the political currents that led to the emergence of Pakistan and is a major contribution towards understanding Pakistan's history.

1999, 350 pages, 216x138mm, Paperback

ISBN: 978-0-19-579220-1, Rs 295

Afghanistan

Louis Dupree

Afghanistan looks at this age-old land and country as it was before the Soviet invasion. It contains two epilogues; one written in 1978 and the other in 1980 right before the Soviet invasion. Afghanistan traces the development of this country from a tribal and politically unstable nation to one with a system of representative government consistent with its cultural and historical patterns. Apart from the narrative, the author presents all this material to us through charts, maps, and illustrations. It also contains appendices on music and calendars used in Afghanistan.

1997, 804 pages, 216x138mm, Paperback

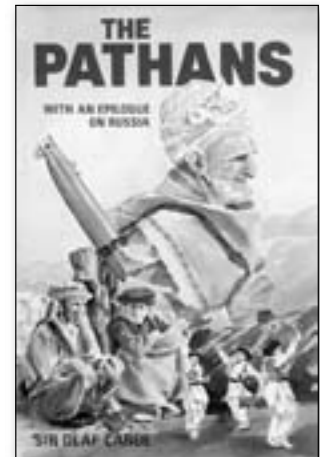

ISBN: 978-0-19-577634-8, Rs 695

The Pathans

With an Epilogue on Russia

Sir Olaf Caroe

The Pathans is a labour of love and in its pages the Pathan and the grandeur of his scenic setting spring to urgent life. The Pathans themselves recognize this work as the locus classicus of their history. This impression includes an Epilogue written by the author in the light of recent events in Afghanistan.

ISBN: 978-0-19-577221-0, Rs 595

Karakoram in Transition

Culture, Development, and Ecology in the Hunza Valley

Edited by Hermann Kreutzmann

For details see page 53

Ancient Cities of the Indus Valley Civilization

Jonathan Mark Kenoyer

The book is written as an introductory text on Indus civilization, along with a catalogue section that illustrates some of the most important objects recovered during the most recent excavations at Harappa, as well as earlier finds from excavations in the 1920s and 1930s. The abundant maps and line drawings, along with illustrations in colour and black and white, make this an optimal teaching tool for high school and college teachers.

Zahoorul Akhlaq

A Critical Life

Roger Connah

This book will not only serve as an introduction to Zahoorul Akhlaq but will also locate this extraordinary artist within a wider art practice which must debate many of the issues facing a young contemporary audience now living under the 'seige of Islam' and the demonisation of Muslims everywhere. Zahoorul Akhlaq was clearly enigmatic, warm, and intimate but his labyrinthine search for a visual philosophy—an iconography of being—remained relatively misunderstood. Akhlaq was not only one of the leading painters and experimental artists in Pakistani art circles, he pioneered the role of art as a seriously engaged critical practice.

Bahawalpur

History and Architecture

Compiled by Major-General Shujaat Zamir Dar

This book highlights the magnificent buildings of great historical and architectural value in Bahawalpur, a former princely state in Pakistan. The imposing forts, magnificent palaces and the shrines of Uch are a living testimony to the grandeur of Cholistan, in the Punjab. Fully illustrated, with more than a hundred photographs, this book serves as a guide and a beacon for archaeologists, architects, anthropologists, and general readers.

The Friends of God

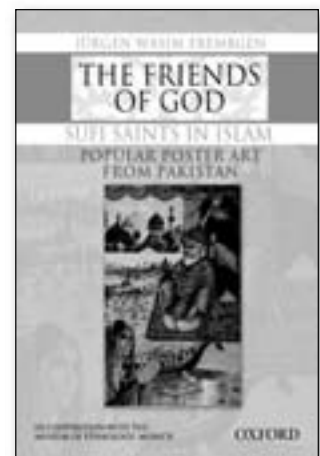

Sufi Saints in Islam: Popular Poster Art from Pakistan

Jürgen Wasim Frembgen

Modern poster-portraits depicting Sufi saints and their shrines are a vivid medium of piety and devotion. These colourful, visually fascinating and powerful prints are particularly significant for the study of contemporary views of the South Asian Sufi tradition shared by the common people. Unfolding a world of imagination, they reflect the visual aesthetics of folk art and pop art steeped in exuberance and playfulness. Through comprehensive documentation and analysis, this book aims to introduce the genre of popular Sufi poster art for the first time to a wider readership.

Artists' Voices: Calligraphy

Amin Gulgee Gallery

This catalogue is a compilation of the works produced by various artists for the exhibition entitled 'Artists' Voices: Calligraphy'. For the exhibition, Amin Gulgee and his co-curator, Sheherbano Hussain, asked artists from across Pakistan to engage with Islamic calligraphy. The idea behind the show was not only to create a dialogue on the subject of calligraphy, but to bring fresh ideas and experimentation to an art form that very much belongs to Pakistan as a society. The show was an attempt to create awareness and dialogue about a great, historical art tradition.

Laila Shahzada

Exploring an Inner Landscape

Salwat Ali

Laila Shahzada was foremost among the handful of women artists of the 1960s brave enough to forge a modern idiom to articulate their aesthetic sensibilities. The first artist to draw inspiration from the archaeological sites of the Indus Valley and Taxila region, Laila's oeuvre played an important role in initiating and popularizing the ancient history of Pakistan as viable subject matter. This book explores Laila's life and art which was characterized by rich colourization and stirring organic undulations with a strong accent on the surreal and the mystical.

The Art of the Mussulmans in Spain

Shahid Suhrawardy

This book covers in rich detail a period of Islamic history not available to most scholars of Islamic Art. As Suhrawardy was well versed in Spanish as well as Arabic and Persian, he was able to study what had been documented in Spanish and other Art History sources about the influences on the Muslims which were brought to bear on the artifacts and architecture of Spain during the period of the Moorish Kingdoms. The author gives detailed descriptions of ivories, laces, and other objects found in the Islamic collections of many of the museums in Europe of that time.

Islamic Architecture in South Asia

Pakistan–India–Bangladesh

Ahmad Nabi Khan

The originality of the book lies in the presentation, in a single volume, of the details of Islamic era monuments in India, Pakistan, and Bangladesh. Meticulous recording of details, elaborate references to historical material, and precise classifications of formal elements make this a valuable reference book. Arranged according to the style and the period, several sites and monuments that were hitherto known only to the specialist, have been included.

Image and Identity

Painting and Sculpture in Pakistan, 1947–1997

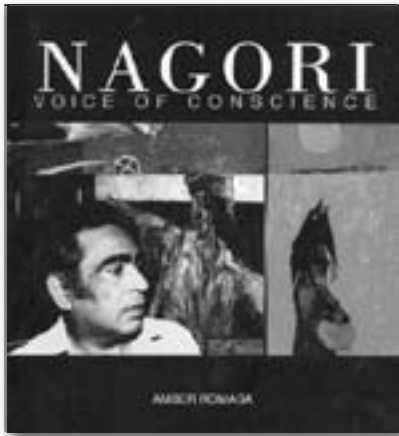

Akbar Naqvi

This is the first-ever history of art written in the country, which discusses artistic forms and personal identities of artists as a discourse on the modern and contemporary art of Pakistan. The author argues that Pakistani art is a distinct facet of the Muslim heritage of the subcontinent. A separate chapter deals with Pakistan's women artists, who are defining their independent role in the gender context. A chapter on sculpture draws notice for the first time to its lively existence in Pakistan.

Nagori Voice of Conscience Amber Romasa

In painting or in his writings on art, Nagori's expression remains forceful and blunt. Any conversation with him on the subject of his work and life means being exposed to an encyclopaedic range of knowledge on the world of art, the significance of protest art, the Indian and Muslim heritage of art, combined with a brimming passionate alertness to historical and present injustices. This book is an exploration of the artist and his powerful works of art which communicate through daring imagery and strident colours, and point out political failings, economic disparity, and social injustice.

Glimpses into the Corridors of Power

Gohar Ayub Khan

The author, being the son of Pakistan's first military dictator, Mohammad Ayub Khan, offers an insider's view of being around the people who occupied the corridors of power and of events that directly and deeply affected the course of Pakistan's unsteady political history. Gohar Ayub was himself politically active, winning a National Assembly seat six times over the years. He was nominated Speaker in 1990 and Foreign Minister in 1997. During his tenure, Pakistan exploded the nuclear bomb in May 1998. He is presently Senior Vice President of the Pakistan Muslim League.

The Dust of the Road

A Translation of Gard-e-Raah

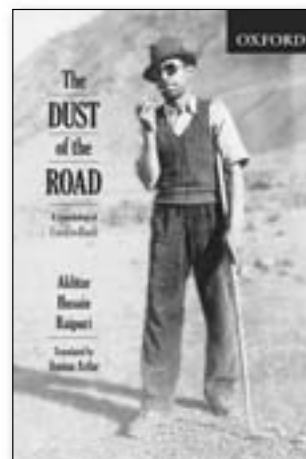

Akhtar Husain Raipuri

Translated by Amina Azfar

This book is the translation of the Urdu memoir, Gard-e-Raah, which was first published as a serialized autobiography in the Urdu journal Afkar, to enthusiastic response. The book has been deemed as one of the finest Urdu memoirs to date. Fascinating vignettes of Raipuri's close association with some of the luminaries of Indian politics and the world of letters, such as Jawaharlal Nehru, Maulvi Abdul Haq and Munshi Premchand, has enhanced the interest of the book. His knowledge of history and his extensive reading in many other subjects, as well as his varied experiences, give the book its wonderfully mature and sophisticated flavour.

Jinnah: Creator of Pakistan

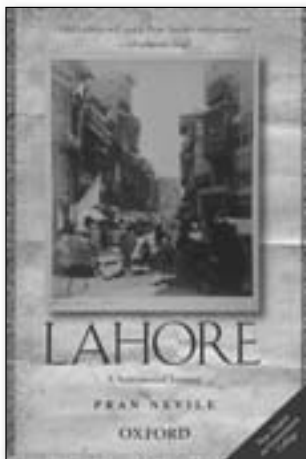

Hector Bolitho

Jinnah: Creator of Pakistan was the official biography of the founder of Pakistan, Quaid-i-Azam Mohammad Ali Jinnah. It proved popular, and from the year of its first publication in 1954, it was printed many times. For a full thirty years it was the only internationally acknowledged work on Mohammad Ali Jinnah. In this book, Bolitho has collected anecdotes and assessments from a large number of Jinnah's colleagues and acquaintances and has strung them together very skilfully upon an outline of the domestic events of Jinnah's life and of the great political events in which he played so dominant a part.

Lahore: A Sentimental Journey

Pran Nevile

Lahore, first published in 1993, is Pran Nevile's tribute to the land of his birth. Nevile's reminiscences transport the reader into the heart of Lahore as it was in the 1930s and 1940s—a city bustling with activity where people coexisted harmoniously, unfettered by considerations of religion, region or caste. The author underscores the contrast between pre- and post-Partition Lahore and the sense of pain, loss, and longing for one's homeland experienced by the displaced millions in India and Pakistan is palpable.

Diaries of Field Marshal Mohammad Ayub Khan, 1966–1972

Edited by Craig Baxter

Field Marshal Ayub Khan kept his diary from September 1966 to October 1972, a very active period in Pakistan's history which included Ayub's yielding of the presidency to Yahya Khan and the period of Yahya's rule that saw the independence of Bangladesh, and also the replacement of Yahya by Zulfikar Ali Bhutto. Ayub's diaries present his views and interpretations of the events of the period for which they were kept. The diaries will provide essential material for those studying the period and for those who lived through these times to understand the views of Ayub.

Huseyn Shaheed Suhrawardy

A Biography

Begum Shaista Suhrawardy Ikramullah

One of the most controversial and also the most misunderstood of Pakistan's political leaders, Huseyn Shaheed Suhrawardy played a pivotal role in sub-continental politics when he undertook the stupendous feat of uniting the educationally, economically and politically backward Muslims of Bengal and leading them to vote for the Muslim League and for the creation of Pakistan. The author, a cousin of Suhrawardy's and herself an active participant in the early political life of the country, was in the enviable position of observing the intricate maneuverings that went on behind the scenes to deprive him of his mandate—and recounts in vivid detail the stress and strains of the times.

A Woman of Substance

The Memoirs of Begum Khurshid Mirza

Edited and Compiled by Lubna Kazim

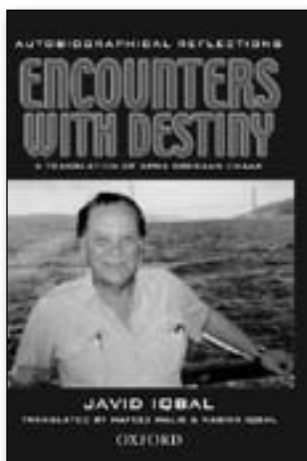

Foreword by Gail Minault

Begum Khurshid Mirza was the daughter of Sheikh Abdullah and Waheed Jahan Begum who were the founders of Aligarh Women's College. This book is more than an account of Khurshid Mirza's personal life. It spans the years from 1857 to 1983 and provides insights into the social conditions of Indian Muslims, the state of Muslim women's education, and the transition to Pakistan, while illuminating Khurshid Mirza's rich and varied life as an activist, radio and television artist, a writer, a devoted daughter, wife, and mother.

A Celebration of a Lifetime of Friendship with Muslims
Heather Bolton

This book covers a journey undertaken by the author, initially in 1968, from the United Kingdom to Pakistan, accompanied by a Pakistani friend living and working in England. The author describes experiences and sights seen during the overland journey by car, and writes about the Pakistani family who took her to their hearts and accepted her fully, notwithstanding the differences in culture, language, and religion. This was the start of a very special friendship that has lasted a lifetime.

My Fellow Traveller
A Translation of Humsafar
Hameeda Akhtar Husain Raipuri

This is Hameeda Akhtar Husain Raipuri's first work written at the age of 72. The warm and guileless flow of her language, and her woman's perceptions, make this book a wonderfully pleasant evocation of a past era and departed individuals. Not only does she throw light on the character and unusual family history of her late husband, Akhtar Husain Raipuri, a well-known intellectual, she also provides luminous vignettes of prominent people such as her father Zafar Omer, a popular Urdu novelist of his day, Sarojini Naidu, Gandhi, and Maulvi Abdul Haq. Moreover, this book fills the gaps in her husband's tour de force, Gard-e-Rah.

Captive Princess

Zebunissa, Daughter of Emperor Aurangzeb

Annie Krieger Krynicki

Princess Zebunissa has remained almost completely ignored by chroniclers and historians. Her father, the Emperor Aurangzeb had incarcerated her in the fortress prison of Salimgarh, where she languished for twenty years until her death. Everything about her life seems shrouded in mystery. Only her poems give us an indication of her character. She seems to have been a very humane person, with weaknesses, passions, and an indomitable pride. This book responds to the need for studies of notable Islamic women that not only sheds light on the condition and culture of their lives but also provides other perspectives of the Muslim process of rule.

The Lamp of Love

Journeying with the Sabri Brothers

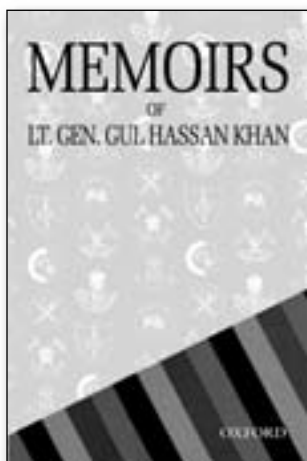

Amatullah Armstrong Chishti

This book recounts the journey that took the author from the midst of an Australian bushland paradise to the rapture of devotion at the shrines of the great Sufi saints in Pakistan and India. It tells of her spiritual connection to Pakistan's legendary qawwals, the Sabri Brothers and her direct experience of being engulfed by their powerful and ecstatic music. The author further elaborates upon the Sufi spiritual journey, highlighting the abysses and peaks which are encountered on the way.

Memoirs of Lt. Gen. Gul Hassan Khan

In his candid autobiography Lieutenant-General Gul Hassan Khan recounts his experiences as ADC to the Quaid-i-Azam which gave him an insight into the character of the founder of Pakistan. His experiences enabled him to assess, in the light of standards set by Jinnah, the politicians who later occupied centre-stage. The author's main concern in the book is with leadership, with the rapport that is, or should be, established between the commander and the men he leads. General Gul Hassan also narrates and analyses dispassionately the events of the India-Pakistan wars of 1965 and 1971. The final section of the book covers events after the fall of Dhaka, and deals with the author's relationship with Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

Sher Shah Suri

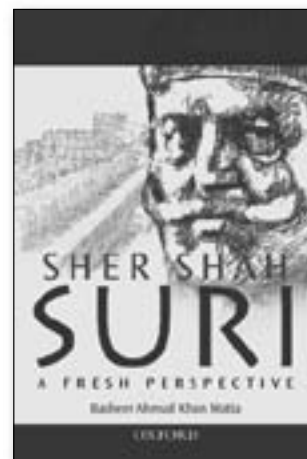

A Fresh Perspective

Basheer Ahmad Khan Matta

This is an account of a man of surpassing personal excellence who remains a chief figure of history both as a great and exemplary ruler of India and as the greatest leader produced by the Afghans. This book seeks to examine and evaluate his performance in both these capacities; to explore the pith and essence of the great man and determine his place in the currents of Indian history as well as in the independent stream of Afghan history. Moreover, and most significantly, its conclusions are drawn from the cardinal lessons ingrained in Indian history.

A Georgian Saga

From the Caucasus to the Indus

Meherafroze Mirza Habib

The book provides an insight into the lives of Mirza Khusro Beg, a scion of a princely family of Georgia, who was adopted by Mir Karam Ali Khan Talpur, and Fareedun, also from Georgia, whose paths fatefully crossed thousands of miles away, in distant Sindh. The author traces the historical background that led to the author's ancestors' migration from Georgia in the early 1800s to Sindh, and recreates the era of domestic feudal revolts, the rapidly changing montage of conquerors and the imposition of foreign rule by rival imperial powers in Georgia. The second half of the book focuses on Khusro's life as a young man, and his relationship with the Mirs of Sindh.

Back to the Pavilion

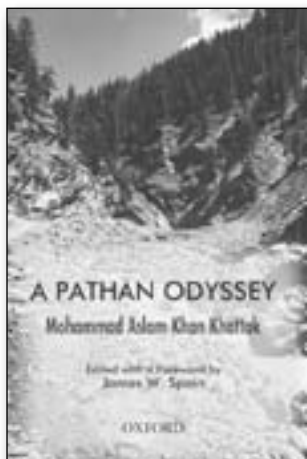

M. Attiqur Rahman

This is a highly readable account of the life of an outstanding military leader of our time—General Attiqur Rahman. His biography portrays a man adept at the use of the pen as well as the sword, a fine fighter and an efficient administrator during his tenure as Governor and Martial Law Administrator. The author's recollection of his regiment's exploits at Moulmein, Burma in 1942, and in the crossing of the Sittang River provides a vivid, though classically understated description of infantry operations. He was among those brave but hapless men who made a rearguard march into India looking 'as gaunt and ragged as scarecrows'.

'Dear Mr Jinnah'

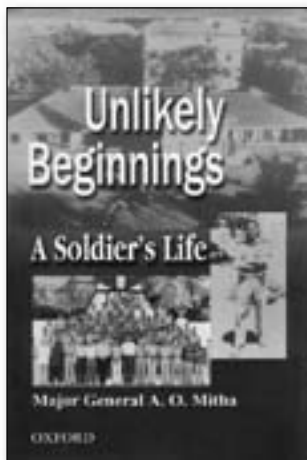

Selected Correspondence and Speeches of Liaquat Ali Khan, 1937-1947

Edited by Roger D. Long
Foreword by Stanley Wolpert

Liaquat Ali Khan's letters to Jinnah and his speeches show Liaquat's devotion to the Quaid-i-Azam and to the concept of Pakistan. From 1937 till 1947, they worked so closely together that Jinnah called Liaquat 'my right hand'. This book shows the relationship which changed the course of history in South Asia.

Unlikely Beginnings

A Soldier's Life

Major-General A. O. Mitha

This military memoir spans some interesting and critical times in the last century. General Mitha's life in the army covered a wide range of experiences and brought him many years in senior positions. As the founder and commander of the SSG he was responsible for creating an important fighting force in the army. Unorthodox and bold, his views on the army's perennial concern with the relationship between juniors and seniors are presented in lively anecdotes.

Quaid-i-Azam Mohammad Ali Jinnah

His Personality and His Politics

S. M. Burke and Salim Al-Din Quraishi

This well-researched book convincingly shows that it was not Quaid-i-Azam Mohammad Ali Jinnah, but Mahatma Gandhi who first introduced religion into politics. Congress policies under Gandhi drove the Hindus and the Muslims irreconcilably apart and they eventually convinced Jinnah, who had long fought for Hindu-Muslim unity, that his dream of united India was nothing but a mirage.

Brothers in the Raj

The Lives of John and Henry Lawrence

Harold Lee

In this first full-length joint biography, the author traces the careers of John and Henry Lawrence, the first British administrators of the Punjab. Both of them acquired formidable reputations as founders of the paternalist tradition of rule in the province and became heroes of the Great Revolt of 1857. Their disagreements during their rule led to Henry's removal to Rajasthan and then to Lucknow where he died. John, who remained at Lahore, organized the recapture of Delhi and survived to become viceroy.

Liaquat Ali Khan His Life and Work

Muhammad Reza Kazimi

This is the first comprehensive and critical study of the life and political career of Liaquat Ali Khan, the first Prime Minister of Pakistan. To analyse his role, the author has drawn upon hitherto unpublished sources and also interviewed Liaquat Ali Khan's wife, Begum Raana Liaquat Ali Khan and brother, Nawabzada Sadaquat Ali Khan. Liaquat's historical role in dividing the armed forces prior to Partition and heading off a coup by the Indian Army in 1947 are some of the aspects which have been highlighted in this book for the first time.

A Journey to Disillusionment

Sherbaz Khan Mazari

Though primarily the memoirs of a leading opposition figure, the book is also in part, a history of Pakistan. Beginning with Mazari's entering politics as a young man in opposition to the Ayub Khan Government, it goes on to give an account of the Bhutto and the Zia periods. The author makes interesting revelations about the leading political players and the events of those tumultuous times which eventually led to Bhutto's ouster in 1977.

The Gun Tree One Woman's War

B. K. Zahrah Nasir

Introduction by Muneeza Shamsie

The Gun Tree is a personal account of one woman's war, both internal and external. Set in Afghanistan during the Russian occupation, when the author travelled to that country with the Mujahideen, dodging bombs and bullets along the way, and the emotional mindfield of her own inner psyche in the wake of a divorce. A high adventure in more ways than one.

Banker to the Poor

The Autobiography of Muhammad Yunus, Founder of the Grameen Bank

Muhammad Yunus with Alan Jolis

Foreword by HRH The Prince of Wales

This is an autobiographical account of the founder of the Grameen Bank, Muhammad Yunus. It is a fundamental rethink on the economic relationship between the rich and the poor, their rights, and obligations. The Grameen Bank is founded on principles of trust and solidarity. Muhammad Yunus believes that the right to credit should be recognized as a fundamental human right because credit is the last hope left to those faced with absolute poverty. The unique and extraordinary methods he used to combat human despair are recounted here with humility and conviction.

The Life and Work of Jalaluddin Rumi

Afzal Iqbal

Rumi's is perhaps the only example in the history of literature where one who is entirely devoted to prose suddenly bursts forth into poetry in his middle age, thus, becoming the greatest mystical poet of all times. In 1261 Rumi began the monumental work of writing the Mathnavi. Towards the end of the book, the author deals with Rumi's thought and provides translations of those portions of the Mathnavi which had hitherto not been available in English.

The Life of Muhammad

A Translation of Ibne Ishaq's Sirat Rasul Allah

A. Guillaume

Professor Guillaume's translation of Ibne Ishaq's Sirat is now reissued. The translator has used Ibn Hisham's abridgement and also included many additions and variants found in the writings of early authors. This book thus presents in English practically all that is known of the Prophet (ﷺ). As the earliest monument of Arabian prose literature, the Sirat remains a work of importance.

Politics and Genre in "Hamlet" Second Edition Revised and Expanded

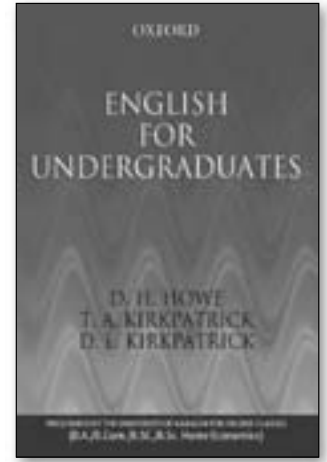

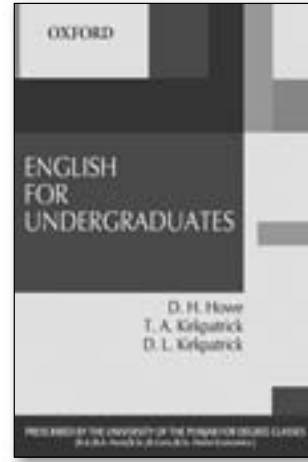

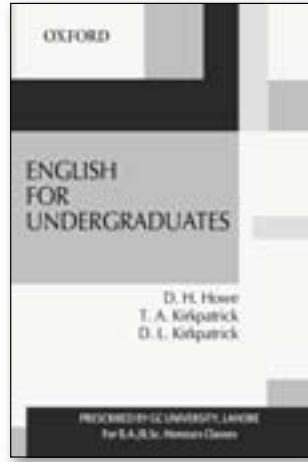

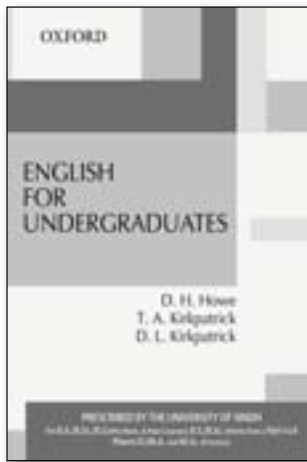

Adrian A. Husain

A leading literary critic takes a historicist view of Shakespeare's most famous and enigmatic play. It is concerned with identity, time and power in Hamlet and the question of aesthetic form in relation to all these. It takes a fresh look at a Renaissance hero who exists, oddly, on the margins of his play—and yet is condemned to be its hero. It frames the question that lies, implicitly, at the heart of Hamlet and, in some strange way, constitutes its tragedy: what is a play if not playacting?

The second edition of the book clarifies and further corroborates this. The themes of incest and political legitimacy are addressed, the 'revision' theory is explored—and debunked—and the ahistorical character of Richard examined in the context of Richard II in additional notes. Elsewhere, the author adduces fresh evidence to demonstrate what he sees as crucial to Hamlet: the protagonist's remarkable facility for and preoccupation with theatre screening and indeed impeding his capacity for spontaneous historical action.

Brilliantly concise Very Short Introductions to almost everything

Combining authority with wit, accessibility and style, Very Short Introductions are ideal for anyone who wants an introduction to some of life's most interesting topics; from emotion and logic, to globalization and terrorism. Perfect for people who want something intellectually stimulating, the carefully selected authors combine authoritative analysis, new ideas, and enthusiasm to make often challenging topics highly readable.

Architecture A Very Short Introduction

Andrew Ballantyne

The balance of posterity and practicality in architecture throughout history, and its cultural relevance—from the Pyramids of Ancient Egypt to the Sydney Opera House, starkly contrasted with common cottage dwellings—are skillfully examined in this book. While the reader is introduced to particular historical periods, and to particular styles such as 'baroque' and 'modern', Andrew Ballantyne goes beyond this to explore the economic, political, and aesthetic significance of buildings, looking at how architecture acquires meaning through tradition and how it contributes to our sense of who we are.

Art History A Very Short Introduction

Dana Arnold

In this clear and concise book, Dana Arnold presents an introduction to the issues, debates, and artefacts that make up the discipline of art history. Using a wide range of images, from Easter Island statues to Constable's The Cornfield, the author shows how the artworks themselves can be the starting point for how we 'read' art history, and suggests a diversity of ways through which we can enjoy, think about, and understand art. With a glossary of technical terms, and list of useful website addresses, this is an invaluable and accessible introduction to a fascinating subject.

Buddhism A Very Short Introduction

Damien Keown

In clear and straightforward language, and with the help of maps, diagrams, and illustrations, this book explains how Buddhism began and how it evolved into its present day form. The central teachings and practices are set out clearly, and key topics such as karma and rebirth, meditation, ethics, and Buddhism in the West, receive detailed coverage in separate chapters. The distinguishing features of the main schools—such as Tibetan and Zen Buddhism—are clearly explained.

Capitalism A Very Short Introduction

James Fulcher

The word 'capitalism' is one that is heard and used frequently, but what does the term really mean? James Fulcher addresses this issue using detailed and absorbing case studies, ranging from the East India Company in the 1600s to the Barings Bank collapse in 1995. He looks at the different forms that capitalism takes in Britain, Japan, Sweden, and the United States. He also discusses the crisis tendencies of capitalism as seen through the tulipomania of 17th-century Holland, the recent South-East Asian banking crisis, and the Enron/Worldcom crisis in America. The book ends by discussing whether capitalism is heading for some final crisis, and where alternative systems are to be found.

Democracy A Very Short Introduction

Bernard Crick

No political concept is more used, and misused, than that of democracy. This book is a short account of the history of the doctrine, practices, and institutions of democracy, from ancient Greece and Rome through the American, French, and Russian revolutions, and its varieties and conditions in the modern world. It argues that democracy is a necessary but not a sufficient condition for good government, and that ideas of the rule of law, and of human rights, and the claims and liberties of groups within society must often limit the will of democratic majorities.

Empire A Very Short Introduction

Stephen Howe

Not only are we living with the legacies of the great colonial empires of the past, but also with the new economic-based imperial systems of the modern world. This book looks at what the 'idea of empire' has meant throughout history—from the ancient Roman Empire, through the reign of Genghis Khan, the British Raj, the colonization of the Americas by the seafaring Spanish, the Atlantic Slave Trade, and the Soviet Empire, to the present day—disentangling the multiple uses and abuses of such labels as 'empire' and 'colonial', and offering a compelling look at the profound changes in the modern world.

The European Union A Very Short Introduction

John Pinder

This book shows how and why the European Union has developed from 1950 up to the present. He explains the interplay between governments and federal elements in the institutions; consensus over the single market and the environment; and conflicts over agriculture, social policies, the Euro, and frontier controls. He shows how the Union relates to its European neighbours, the United States, and the rest of the world, and outlines the choices that lie ahead. He is clear about his federalist orientation, presents the arguments fairly, and is scrupulous about the facts.

Evolution A Very Short Introduction

Brian and Deborah Charlesworth

This incisive and thought-provoking book introduces some of the most important findings and concepts of evolutionary biology, such as the formation and divergence of species, adaptation, mutation, and natural selection. The authors trace the progress of evolutionary thought from the first publication of Darwin and Wallace over 140 years ago, to recent evidence provided by studying evolution at the molecular level. The book ends by showing how evolutionary ideas illuminate some of the hardest questions in modern biology, such as why ageing happens and why some animals behave altruistically.

Fascism

A Very Short Introduction

Kevin Passmore

Kevin Passmore brilliantly unravels the paradoxes of one of the most important phenomena of the modern world—tracing the origins of fascism in the intellectual, political, and social crises of the late nineteenth century, fascist movements and regimes in Italy and Germany, and the fortunes of ‘failed’ fascist movements in Eastern Europe, Spain, and the Americas. He shows how important racist nationalism was to fascism, examines its appeal to women and men, workers and capitalists, and concludes with a look at the recent revival of the extreme right in Europe.

Globalization

A Very Short Introduction

Manfred Steger

‘Globalization’ has become the buzzword of our time—a term that describes a variety of changing economic, political, cultural, ideological, and environmental processes that are alleged to have accelerated and intensified in the last few decades. Manfred Steger presents globalization in accessible language as a multifaceted process encompassing global, regional, and local aspects of social life. He explores whether it is a new phenomenon, and if it should be considered a ‘good’ or ‘bad’ thing—a question that has been hotly debated in classrooms, boardrooms, and on the streets—especially since the 9/11 terrorist attacks.

Global Warming A Very Short Introduction

Mark Maslin

This is an up-to-date and readable book about the predicted impacts of global warming and the surprises that could be in store for us in the near future. It unpacks the controversies that surround global warming, drawing on material from the recent report of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC). The author presents the findings of the Panel for the first time and discusses the potential climate surprises which the IPCC has not yet had time to assimilate. He ends by discussing the politics of global warming, and looks at what we can do now to adapt to climate change and mitigate its worst effects.

Linguistics A Very Short Introduction

P. H. Matthews

Linguistics falls between arts and science, where the most fascinating discoveries and the most important problems are found. Peter Matthews begins his discussion with the oldest, 'arts' end of the subject and moves chronologically through to the latest in scientific research. He looks in turn at such areas as the prehistory of languages and their common origins, language and evolution, the nature of change inherent in language, grammars and dictionaries, and phonetics. An appraisal of the latest research into language in neuro-science completes this refreshing and insightful introduction to linguistics.

Literary Theory A Very Short Introduction

Jonathan Culler

Literary Theory is a controversial subject. Said to have transformed the study of culture and society in the past two decades, it is accused of undermining respect for tradition and truth, encouraging suspicion about the political and psychological implications of cultural products rather than admiration for great literature. In this book, Jonathan Culler explains 'theory', not by describing warring 'schools' but by sketching key 'moves' that theory has encouraged and speaking directly about the implications of theory for thinking about literature, human identity, and the power of language.

Logic

A Very Short Introduction

Graham Priest

Logic is often perceived as an esoteric subject, having little to do with the rest of philosophy, and even less to do with real life. In this lively and accessible introduction, Graham Priest shows how wrong this conception is. He explores the philosophical roots of the subject, explaining how modern formal logic deals with issues ranging from the existence of God and the reality of time to paradoxes of self-reference, change, and probability. Along the way, the book explains the basic ideas of formal logic in simple, non-technical terms, as well as the philosophical pressures to which these have responded. This is a book for anyone who has ever been puzzled by a piece of reasoning.

Machiavelli

A Very Short Introduction

Quentin Skinner

Niccolo Machiavelli taught that political leaders must be prepared to do evil that good may come of it, and his name has been a byword ever since for duplicity and immorality. Is his sinister reputation deserved? In answering this question Quentin Skinner focuses on three major works, The Prince, the Discourses, and The History of Florence, and distils from them an introduction to Machiavelli's doctrines of exemplary clarity.

Nationalism

A Very Short Introduction

Steven Grosby

In this compelling book, Steven Grosby uses examples throughout history, from ancient Israel to the present-day Balkans, to discuss how nations arise from a sense of kinship, territory, history, and shared religion. Highlighting the social, philosophical, and anthropological perspectives, he asks why nations exist, when they first appeared, and what this divisiveness can tell us about our nature as human beings.

Philosophy A Very Short Introduction

Edward Craig

This lively and engaging book is the ideal introduction for anyone who has ever been puzzled by what philosophy is or what it is for. Edward Craig argues that philosophy is not an activity from another planet: learning about it is just a matter of broadening and deepening what most of us do already. He shows that philosophy is no mere intellectual pastime: thinkers such as Plato, Buddhist writers, Descartes, Hobbes, Hume, Hegel, Darwin, Mill, and de Beauvoir were responding to real needs and events—much of their work shapes our lives today, and many of their concerns are still ours.

Politics A Very Short Introduction

Kenneth Minogue

In this provocative but balanced essay, Kenneth Minogue discusses the development of politics from the ancient world to the twentieth century. He prompts us to consider why political systems evolve, how politics offers both power and order in our society, whether democracy is always a good thing, and what future politics may have in the twenty-first century.

Postcolonialism A Very Short Introduction

Robert J. C. Young

This innovative and lively book is quite unlike any other introduction to postcolonialism. Robert Young examines the political, social and cultural after-effects of decolonization by presenting situations, experiences, and testimony rather than examining the abstract theory. He situates the debate in a wide cultural context, discussing its importance as an historical condition, using examples such as the status of aboriginal people, of those dispossessed from their land, Algerian rai music, postcolonial feminism and global, social and ecological movements.

Prehistory A Very Short Introduction

Chris Gosden

Many of the familiar aspects of modern life are no more than a century or two old, yet our deep social structures and skills were in large measure developed by small bands of our prehistoric ancestors many millennia ago. We all have our prehistories, even in this best documented of all centuries, and they are vital to our emotional, intellectual and social well-being. The book compels one to think seriously about who we are by considering who we have been, presenting a riveting and absorbing exploration through four and a half million years of human existence.

Psychology A Very Short Introduction

Gillian Butler and Freda McManus

This book provides an up-to-date overview of the main areas of psychology, translating complex psychological matters, such as perception, into readable topics so as to make psychology accessible for newcomers to the subject. The authors use everyday examples as well as research findings to foster curiosity about how and why the mind works in the way it does, and why we behave in the ways that we do. This book explains why knowing about psychology is important and relevant in the modern world.

Shakespeare A Very Short Introduction

Germaine Greer

In this book Germaine Greer explores Shakespeare as a thinker, unravelling the methods he used to dramatize moral and intellectual issues in a way that made his audience dazzlingly aware of an imaginative dimension to daily life. She argues that as long as Shakespeare's work remains essential to the English-speaking world, it will retain the values which make it unique.

Socialism A Very Short Introduction

Michael Newman

Michael Newman examines and explains the successes and failures of modern socialism by taking an international perspective—ranging from communism in Cuba to social democracy in Sweden. Discussing its evolution from the industrial towns of the 19th century to its response to the feminist, Green, and anti-capitalist movements today, Newman concludes that, with its values of equality, solidarity, and cooperation, socialism remains as relevant as ever but that it needs to learn lessons from the past.

Socrates

A Very Short Introduction

C. C. W. Taylor

Socrates has a unique position in the history of philosophy and had it not been for his influence on Plato, the whole development of Western philosophy might have been unimaginably different. Yet Socrates wrote nothing himself, and our knowledge of him is derived primarily from the engaging and infuriating figure who appears in Plato's dialogues. This book explores the relationship between the historical Socrates and the Platonic character, and examines the enduring image of Socrates as the ideal exemplar of the philosophic life; a thinker whose moral and intellectual integrity permeated every detail of his life, even in the face of betrayal and execution by his fellow Athenians.

Terrorism

A Very Short Introduction

Charles Townshend

Is one person's terrorist another's freedom fighter? Is terrorism crime or war? Can there be a 'war against terrorism'? This book charts a clear path through the efforts to understand and explain modern terrorism. It unravels complex questions such as: Are terrorists criminals? How far does media publicity sustain terrorism? What can be done about it? It also examines the historical, ideological, and local roots of terrorist violence, and the success of specific terrorist and anti-terrorist campaigns in the more distant, as well as the recent past.

World Music

A Very Short Introduction

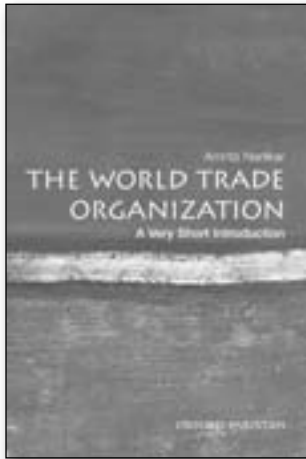

Philip V. Bohlman

In this fascinating introduction to the remarkable diversity of world music, Bohlman explores the interpretation and, sometimes, misinterpretation of world music by the West. More recent musical encounters in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, such as international festivals and world fairs, reveal the enduring fascination with ethnic diversity. World music's invention and growth, as well as concerns for its 'authenticity' and 'universality', are explored through scrutinizing a selection of music cultures and events such as the Grammy Awards and the Eurovision Song Contest, as well as through examining such musicians as Bob Marley, Manu Dibango, Béla Bartók, the Chieftains, and Leadbelly.

The Politics of Managing Water

Edited by Kaiser Bengali

Water is the scarcest natural resource today and would become the main cause of contention in the twenty-first century. Although Pakistan is not a water-stressed country by hydraulic definitions, yet the question of water distribution has, for Pakistan, become the source of wide-ranging contention both within the country and with its immediate neighbour to the east. In this volume experts from various fields discuss all factors—scientific, engineering, social, and economic—pertaining to the debate.

Military Inc.

Ayesha Siddiqi

This book analyzes the relationship between the military's corporate operations and its authoritarianism in Pakistan. These operations vary from large manufacturing units to smaller ventures such as bakeries and gas stations. The common factor amongst all these operations is the lack of transparency. This book fills a theoretical gap and provides a comprehensive analysis of Pakistan military's business expansion, especially in the last five years, and its impact on politics, economics, and the military profession.

Initiating Devolution for Service Delivery in Pakistan

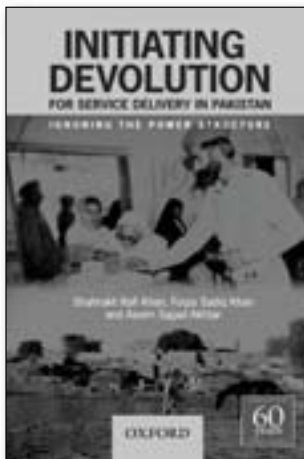

Ignoring the Power Structure

Shahrukh Rafi Khan, Foqia Sadiq Khan, and Aasim Sajjad Akhtar

This book is about initiating devolution and demonstrates that reforms will be ineffective or subverted unless it addresses key pre-requisites. The most important pre-requisite is addressing the power structure in the context in which devolution is to be introduced. This is an important book not only because of conceptual contributions but also because the authors were actually involved in the initiation and implementation of the devolution plan in Pakistan at the highest policy level. This enabled the documentation of how and where the plan was inadequate from conception to execution.

The Politics of Islamic Finance

Edited by Clement M. Henry and Rodney Wilson

In the wake of the terrorist attacks on America, the UN Security Council passed a resolution targeting transnational sources of terrorist funds. The United States and the IMF are encouraging the governments of the Middle East to adopt policies of economic liberalism. One unexpected consequence is that a new type of capitalism, based on Islamic values and beliefs is emerging. This book explores the political implications of the slow but steady accumulation of Islamic capital and demonstrates that the commonly perceived connection between Islamic finance and money laundering and terrorism is simplistic and misleading.

Human Security in South Asia

Mahbub ul Haq Human Development Centre (MHHDC)

This report by Mahbub ul Haq underlines the imperative of focusing on the security of people rather than only on territorial security. It presents an in-depth analysis of the multiple threats to human security from conflicts in South Asia, to economic, health and environmental insecurity, to insecurity due to governance failure at many levels. It argues that to sustain economic growth South Asia needs to seriously address the human security concerns of people.

Local Government Finance: Some Political Aspects

A Case Study of the Punjab

Ayaz Muhammad

Local government is an essential component of any political system. This book carries a huge data of local government's income, expenditure, grants, etc., which the author has carefully analysed. The author focuses on the rise of these and other new challenges and explains clearly why Pakistan must adopt a more comprehensive and viable structure of local government. This structure must have the capacity to work as an agent of economic development, to ensure devolution of power, and to work as an agency to help in the fair distribution of resources in the various regions of Pakistan.

Economic Management in Pakistan, 1999–2002

Ishrat Husain

Pakistan has been faced with a serious financial crisis since May 1998. The new government, which assumed office in October 1999, embarked upon a serious programme of economic revival to get the country out of the debt trap. Policies pursued have begun to pay dividends and despite several shocks to the economy the country has been able to achieve stability. This book describes the process through which the economy was managed during 1999–2000

Pakistan: The Political Economy of Lawlessness

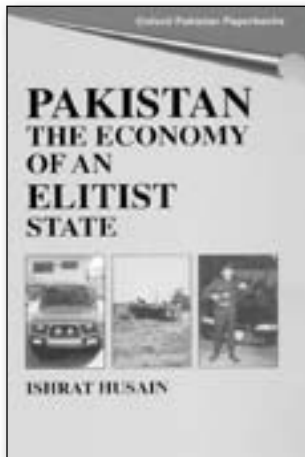

Azhar Hassan Nadeem

Organized violent crime and a culture of lawlessness has had an adverse impact on the economy of Pakistan. There has been a dim realization of this state of affairs, but it has taken a superior police officer of Pakistan to present a quantitative measurement of its impact on Pakistan's already fragile economy. Not content to dissect and analyse the prevalence of crime in Pakistan, the author presents a strategy and policy for remedying the ailments of governance besetting Pakistan on the basis of an experiment in community policing he successfully carried out in two districts of the country.

Gender and Education in Pakistan

Edited by Rashida Qureshi and Jane F. A. Rarieya

This book explores gender and education in Pakistan by looking at the underlying processes that result in different patterns of educational experiences of and outcomes for females and males. All the chapters are based on research studies that were conducted in different parts of Pakistan and explore diverse aspects of gender in relation to education. The book makes gender issues in education in Pakistan more visible by illustrating how gender is both a very personal and yet, public issue, and calls for more carefully thought out approaches to dealing with gender disadvantage in the education system.

A Comparative Institutional Analysis of Government, Private, and NGO Schools

Shahrukh Rafi Khan

This book aims to suggest ways to make the public sector rural primary schooling more effective. The broader objective is a comparative institutional analysis of government, private, and NGO schools. The study identifies processes pushing for improvements in the NGO and private sectors and those resulting in obvious failures in the government sectors. The focus is on operational lessons derived from NGO and private sector delivery to make public sector delivery more effective.

Sabiha Mansoor

Based on an in-depth socio-linguistic case study of language planning in Pakistan, this book examines the extent of the linguistic support in Urdu, English or the mother tongue available to students to cope with their courses in higher education. This book is unique in that it illustrates the socio-linguistic profile in Pakistan and provides insights into the complex issues of multilingualism and ethnicity, and their impact on linguistic, educational and socio-cultural outcomes. It focuses particularly on problems confronting language planning in higher education, along with guidelines for its implementation.

Transforming Schools in Pakistan Towards the Learning Community

Edited by John Retallick and Iffat Farah

This book aims to answer a very pertinent question: is it possible to improve the quality of school education in Pakistan and other developing countries? The book argues that it is possible and endeavours to point the way forward. The crux of the argument is that schools need to be transformed into learning communities if significant improvement is to take place. In a traditional school only students are considered learners and most learning is by rote. A learning community is a school where all participants are learners, not just the students. School becomes a place where understanding, enquiry and questioning are encouraged in all teaching and learning encounters.

An Indian Passage to Europe The Travels of Fath Nawaz Jang

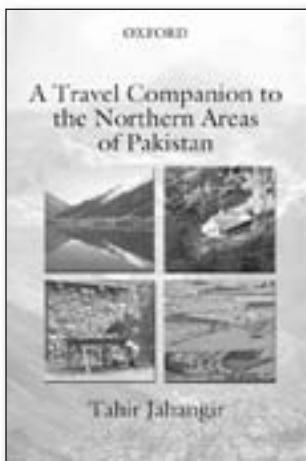

Edited by Omar Khalidi

Between 1600–1900, several thousand Indians of different social classes travelled to Britain. Yet compared to the large number of travelogues and memoirs written by Europeans who visited India during this period only a handful of Indian accounts of Britain and Europe have come to light. One of them is by Mahdi Hasan Khan Fath Nawaz Jang, (1852–1904), a Hyderabad civil servant of Lucknow origin. His fascinating observations of the British and European society are among a mere handful of available Indian representations of Europeans in the nineteenth century.

British Relations with Sind, 1799–1843

An Anatomy of Imperialism

Robert A. Huttenback

Huttenback's study of British relations with an independent Sindh from 1799 to 1843 provides valuable insight into the complexities of nineteenth-century British imperialism. Here is a thorough investigation of British activities in Sindh after 1799, the actual conquest, and subsequent repercussions. Huttenback presents the whole scope of British relations with Sindh during this critical period without sacrificing the pre-annexation issues to the circumstances surrounding Sir Charles Napier and the conquest.

McMurdo's Account of Sind

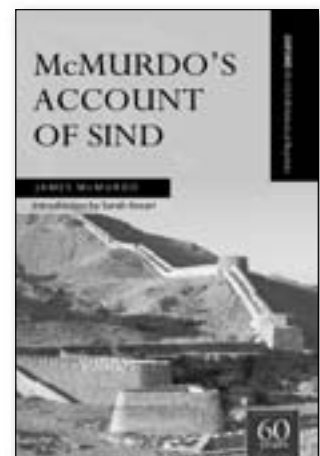

James McMurdo

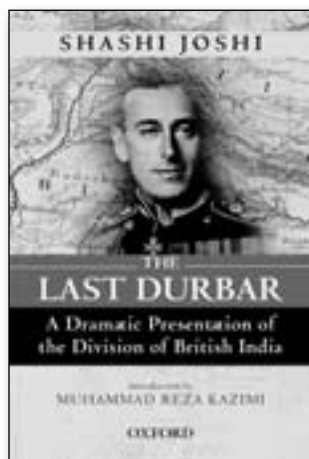

This book provides readers with a vivid picture of how South Asians were perceived by many in Britain in the mid-nineteenth century, as well as of life in Sindh under the Amirs, rulers of the region at that time. McMurdo's description indicates the bias and prejudice of an imperialist viewpoint and the political ramifications of such perceptions. At the time of Charles Napier's conquest of Sindh in 1843, the British government launched an adverse propaganda campaign aimed at depicting the Amirs as being incapable of looking after their own territories. This account can be counted as a part of this campaign. The book reflects the broad political canvas of that time and prepares the backdrop for the eventual conquest of Sindh.

The Last Durbar

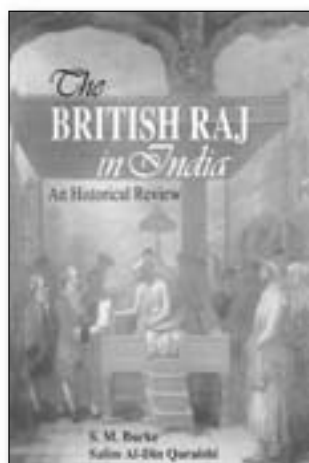

A Dramatic Presentation of the Division of British India

Shashi Joshi
Introduction by Muhammad Reza Kazimi

This play is based on the private papers of Mountbatten, including verbatim records and testimonies, discussions and suggestions of the leading Indian actors involved in the division of British India. It is a nuanced and multi-layered account of the months and days that led to the partition of British India. It exposes the palpable relationships of the leading actors in this drama, the moves and counter moves, interactions and maneuvering between a range of characters, against the backdrop of momentous events and developments of Partition.

The British Raj in India

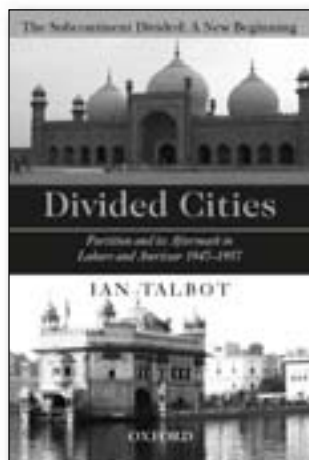

An Historical Review

S. M. Burke and Salim Al-Din Quraishi

This treatise on the Raj perceptively reviews the roles played by the three principle parties in the transfer of power: the British, the Hindus, and the Muslims. The British conquered and ruled India with the help of Indians, but when the weight of public opinion made it impossible for them to stay any longer, they managed to extricate themselves from the chaos with remarkable political dexterity. The Hindus with the lead in Western education and numerical and economic superiority, lost the bid for a united India because they overplayed their hand. The Muslims, demoralized and discredited by the British after 1857, had a hard time convincing the world that unmodified Westminster parliamentary institutions would install the Hindus as their masters for all time.

Divided Cities

Partition and its Aftermath in Lahore and Amritsar, 1947–1957

Ian Talbot

This book is a pioneering locality based study of the processes of violence, migration and resettlement arising from the 1947 partition of the subcontinent. The focus is on the neighbouring cities of Lahore and Amritsar that were divided by the new international boundary which ran through the Punjab. The book provides a much needed comparative dimension to the study of the aftermath of Partition. It is an important case study for wider issues of collective violence, forced migration, and refugee experience.

Colonial Reports on Pakistan's Frontier Tribal Areas

Edited and Introduced by Robert Nichols

Those hoping to fully understand the fighting in 2004 around Wana in South Waziristan will gain insight from this book. Throughout 2004, Pakistan used political negotiation and military force to crush or disperse militants, especially near the town of Wana. This short volume reprints two, one-hundred-year old colonial reports on FATA regions, one on Wana and one on the Adam Khel Afridi homelands near Peshawar. These reports suggest the difficulty that state builders with centralizing ambitions have always had in prevailing against semi-independent communities yet to be fully integrated into wider political, economic and administrative systems.

Partition of India Legend and Reality

H. M. Seervai

This book gives an in-depth historical analysis of the events and causes that led to the partition of the Indian Subcontinent in 1947. It is based on historical research undertaken by the author over a period of several years and includes data based on the 12 volumes of official documents published under the title Transfer of Power, 1942-47. The thesis of the book is that Gandhi, Nehru, and the Congress leadership were primarily responsible for the decisions leading to the partition of India and exposes the myth that Jinnah was solely responsible for the Partition.

Sufism in South Asia

Impact on Fourteenth Century Muslim Society

Riazul Islam

Sufism in India has played many roles in Indo-Muslim history. It was the means by which a race of conquerors could reach out to the spiritual elements of Indian society in which asceticism was highly regarded. It was responsible for initiating dialogue with Hindu devotees. Riazul Islam in this book focuses more on the seamy rather than the spiritual side in order to redress the academic balance.

The Great Divide Britain-India-Pakistan

H. V. Hodson

On 14 August 1947, the new nation of Pakistan was carved out of the body of India, and Britain's century-long rule over the Indian subcontinent ended. The author asks some penetrating questions: Why did the climax come so swiftly? What is the truth about the enforced resignation of the previous viceroy, Lord Wavell, and Lord Mountbatten's appointment and instructions? Hodson charts the events since Partition—the triumphs and tragedies, the issues of peace and conflict between India and Pakistan, culminating in the truncation of Pakistan in 1971.

India–Pakistan Negotiations Is Past Still Prologue?

Dennis Kux

This book provides a historical and current review of the trends of six key India–Pakistan negotiations largely over shared resources and political boundaries. Pre-independence political leadership and negotiations that led to the partitioning of British India into these two nation-states provide insights on subsequent India–Pakistan negotiations. Reviewing these critical negotiations show how both countries must exert robust, creative, and enduring leadership to achieve concrete, broad-based improvement in their bilateral relations, and ultimately, South Asian regional security.

Edited by Ian Talbot

The connection between religion, politics and violence is a controversial and pressing concern in the life of the subcontinent. This study attempts to unpick some of these linkages by means of a series of detailed historical case studies that cover the period from 1947 until 2002. The contributions from both leading experts and research students provide important comparative insights into sectarian and communal violence in India and Pakistan.

Islam in the European Union Transnationalism, Youth and the War on Terror

Edited by Yunas Samad and Kasturi Sen

This book is about Muslims in Europe and the 'War on Terror': its causes and consequences for European citizenship and exclusion particularly for young people. The rising tide of hostility towards people of Muslim origin is challenged in this collection from a varied and multinational perspective. The chapters illustrate the diversity of societies with Muslim majority populations and challenge the dominant paradigm of what has come to be known as 'Islamophobia' since the War on Terror.

South Asia in World Politics

Edited by Devin T. Hagerty

This book offers a comprehensive introduction to the politics and international relations of South Asia, a key area encompassing the states of Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Bhutan, India, the Maldives, Nepal, Pakistan, and Sri Lanka. Exploring the many facets of this dynamic region, the book also assesses U.S. policy towards Afghanistan and explains the importance of Bangladesh and Pakistan, two of only a handful of Islamic states with significant track records as democracies.

The Selected Writings of Eqbal Ahmad

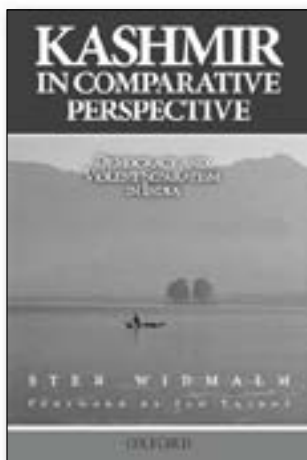

Edited by Carollee Bengelsdorf, Margaret Cerullo, and Yogesh Chandrani

Foreword by Noam Chomsky

The book has a series of themes beginning with the revolutionary theory and counter-insurgency, moving on to the analysis of post-colonial states in the Third World, the Cold War and its aftermath, and finally the Middle Eastern and South Asian impasses and hopes. Eqbal Ahmad's rendition of these events benefits not only from his keen analytical faculties, broad knowledge, and many years of direct engagement, but also from his ability to observe these developments from a perspective that integrates his deep immersion in the culture, history, and experiences of both the North and the South.

Kashmir in Comparative Perspective

Democracy and Violent Separatism in India

Sten Widmalm

Foreword by Ian Talbot

In this balanced, carefully researched and well designed account of the Kashmir crisis, Sten Widmalm argues that ethnic violence is not an objective force with self-generating political consequences but a means by which competing elites carry on political struggle. The strength of the book is that it engages alternative explanations of ethnic conflict even as it teaches the particularity of specific cases in India.

Jihad, Hindutva and the Taliban

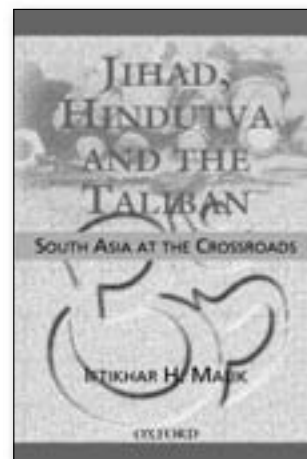

South Asia at the Crossroads

Iftikhar H. Malik

This book explores significant developments in recent years that have completely transformed the South Asian political contours, including crucial societal movements such as Talibanization, Jihad, Hindutva, Sunni statism etc. These new trajectories have equally generated intra-society chasms, especially for ethnic and religious minorities, and have tried to offer alternative interpretations of national identity, occasionally advocating a forceful ethno-religious conformity. While 'indigenous' elite led these ultra right, populist movements, the foot soldiers are all trained in madrassas or temples harbouring an emotional hatred for an invisible enemy.

Crescent Between Cross and Star

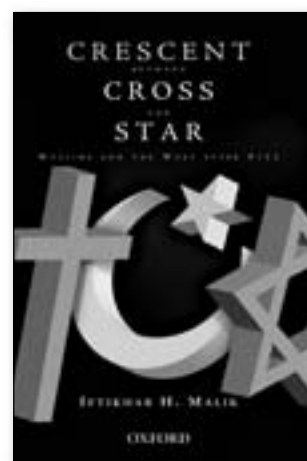

Muslims and the West after 9/11

Iftikhar H. Malik

Tragic events like 9/11 have only intensified anti-Muslim campaigns at various levels and places. Other than the devastating invasions of Afghanistan and Iraq with more feared to come, Muslim human rights and their religious heritage have come under an assault in the Holy Land and several other regions. This book seeks to place this volatile and pernicious phase within the historical and geo-political context by reviewing Western scholarship and policies affecting Muslims at large. In addition, it seeks to investigate diverse Muslim responses on vital issues such as gender, secularism, and democracy.

East Pakistan: The Endgame

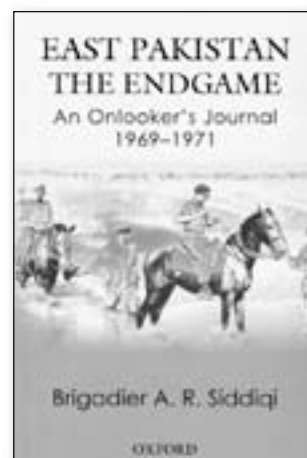

An Onlooker's Journal, 1969–1971

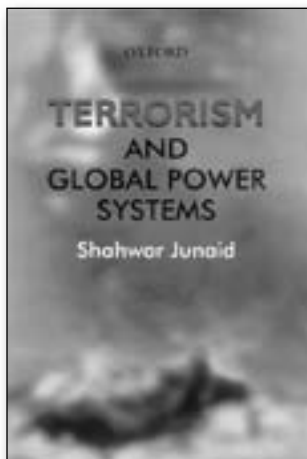

Brigadier A. R. Siddiqi

The 1971 East Pakistan tragedy was not just a failure of the military but also the collapse of the civil society in West Pakistan. The few voices raised against the military action were too feeble to make the army change the course it had set itself leading to a military defeat and the break-up of the country. The author's assessments and forecasting of happenings in East Pakistan are objective, constructive and without any prejudice or bias. This book will contribute much towards the much-needed bridge building between Pakistan and Bangladesh.

Danger in Kashmir

Josef Korbel

Foreword by C. W. Nimitz

Perhaps the most important problem plaguing India and Pakistan today is their dispute over the ownership of the State of Jammu and Kashmir. Initial efforts were made in 1948 by the United Nations to seek a peaceful solution to the dispute. The author was a member of the UN Commission on India and Pakistan, and provides a first-hand account of these efforts of the United Nations to resolve the Kashmir issue.

Kashmir

Ethnic Conflict, International Dispute

Iffat Malik

The Kashmir crisis is more than fifty years old, and as it is an internationally explosive issue, the literature on the topic is also voluminous, projecting the views of both sides as well as impartial world bodies and authors. Dr Iffat Sanna Malik has made an objective study and dealt with the domestic and international aspects—first separately and then in unison. Original in its treatment, this treatise is heavily documented and should be of use to scholars and general readers alike.

Pakistan and the Afghan Conflict, 1979–1985

With an Afterword Covering Events From 1985–2001

Frederic Grare

As the war against terrorism rages in Afghanistan, this book probes the motives governing the first Pakistan-American alliance, directed then against the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan. This study covers the Afghan conflict from 1979 to 1985, and considers centrally the security concerns of Pakistan during the conflict. The author's discussion encompasses the strategic concerns of a nuclearized South Asia and provides a key to the origins of the 2001 Afghan conflict.

The Politics of Knowledge in Pre-modern Islam Negotiating Ideology and Religious Inquiry

Omid Safi

The eleventh and twelfth centuries were a period of great significance in Islamic history when the Great Saljuqs, a Turkish-speaking tribe from central Asia, ruled the eastern half of the Islamic world for a great portion of that time. In a far-reaching analysis that combines social, cultural, and political history, Omid Safi demonstrates how the Saljuqs tried to create a lasting political presence by joining forces with scholars and saints who functioned under state patronage. He makes a significant contribution to understanding premodern Islam as well as illuminating the complex relationship between power and religious knowledge.

Islamic Legal Interpretation Muftis and their Fatwas

Edited by Muhammad Khalid Masud, Brinkley Messick, and David S. Powers

For more than a millennium, fatwas have guided and shaped Muslim understandings of Islamic law yet this key institution in Muslim society has not been the subject of a major examination until now. Fatwas have served to reaffirm received wisdom, caution against error, and chart novel responses to changing circumstances. This book uses an approach unique in Islamic studies, a casebook of expert analyses of fatwas from a wide range of times and places. The first chapter sets forth the origins, classical diversity, and modern development of the fatwa, while the following chapters illustrate particular opinions and their contexts.

The Ulama in Contemporary Islam Custodians of Change

Muhammad Qasim Zaman

This book offers the first sustained comparative perspectives on the ulama and their increasingly crucial religious and political activism. It shows how issues of religious authority are debated in contemporary Islam, how Islamic law and tradition are continuously negotiated in a rapidly changing world, and how the ulama both react to and shape larger Islamic social trends.

Muslim Conceptions of Islam and Society

Riaz Hassan

This book explores key aspects of Muslim religious and social consciousness in Islamic societies. The analysis is based on interviews of 4,500 Muslims from Indonesia, Pakistan, Kazakhstan and Egypt. The study breaks new ground in exploring the relationship between religion and politics, and Muslim attitudes towards political Islam, gender roles, veiling, and patriarchy. This study challenges the perception of Islam as an essentialist, monolithic and static phenomenon.

Islamic Fundamentalism and the Limits of Modern Rationalism: A Work of Comparative Political Theory

Roxanne L. Euben

The author has convincingly argued that political Islam cannot be understood by looking at its outer expression only, rather, in order to comprehend the phenomenon, an inquiry into its inner meaning is necessary. The book highlights the philosophical and constructive aspects of Islamic fundamentalism in a world that is getting denuded of any solid foundation for moral values.

Labour Legislation and Trade Unions in India and Pakistan

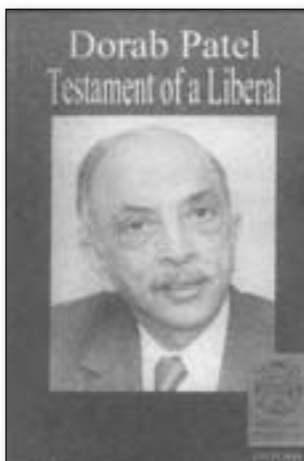

Ali Amjad

Foreword by Justice (Retd) Fakhruddin G. Ebrahim

This is a pioneering work on labour legislation in South Asia. The author traces labour legislation from the inception of the British rule and comes down to contemporary issues. Brevity of style and expanse of subject matter have been achieved, as expected of a veteran trial lawyer, making this book equally interesting to lawyers, political scientists, sociologists, and human rights activists.

Breaking Links

A Translation of Sadiyon ki Zanjeer

Razia Fasih Ahmad

Introduction by Asif Farrukhi

A compelling tale of love gone awry through a grievous sense of 'honour' reaching out across generations, this is a novel about the unhappy state of Pakistan in and around 1971. The story is set in a time when the two unequal and distant 'wings', of the relatively young nation-state, had been slowly but steadily drifting away from each other, to finally break apart with a vengeance and untold violence. This breaking apart is at the centre of this novel, and the story is built around the looming crisis and the final hour of disintegration and dissolution.

And the World Changed

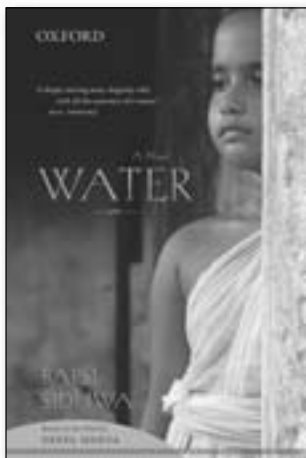

Contemporary Stories by Pakistani Women

Edited by Muneeza Shamsie

This pioneering work presents a collection of contemporary English language stories by women of Pakistani origin. There is new fiction by well-known writers such as Rukhsana Ahmad, Tahira Naqvi, Fahmida Riaz, and Kamila Shamsie, as well as extracts from the novels of Uzma Aslam Khan, Feryal Ali Gauhar, Bapsi Sidhwa and the memoirs of Sara Suleri. Over twenty women writers are represented. Their work has great diversity but is united by their sensibilities and experiences as women of Pakistani origin. The stories take the reader from New York on 9/11, to the villages of Pakistan and explore a host of issues ranging from gender, war, and identity to age-old social customs and attitudes which shape their inner worlds.

Water: A Novel

Bapsi Sidhwa

Set in India in 1938, against the backdrop of Mahatma Gandhi's rise to power, Water follows the life of eight-year-old Chuyia, a child-bride who is abandoned at a widows' ashram in Benares after her fifty-year-old husband dies. Unwilling to accept her fate, Chuyia becomes a catalyst for change in the lives of the widows. Sidhwa's sensitive storytelling makes this a novel rich with unforgettable characters. Water offers a riveting examination of the lives of widows in colonial India but ultimately it is a haunting and lyrical story of love, faith, and redemption.

Beloved City

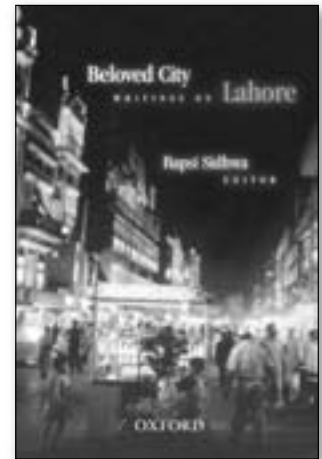

Writings on Lahore

Edited by Bapsi Sidhwa

This anthology brings together verse and prose: essays, stories, chronicles, and profiles by people who have shared a relationship with Lahore. From the mystical poems of Madho Lal Hussain and Bulleh Shah to Iqbal's ode and Faiz's lament; from McLagan's and Aijazuddin's historical treatises and Kipling's 'chronicles' to Samina Quraeshi's intricate portraits of the Old City and Irfan Husain's delightful account of Lahori cuisine, Beloved City is a marriage of the sacred and profane. Significant Pakistani writers like Intezar Hussain, Aamer Hussain, Kishwar Naheed, Bapsi Sidhwa, Sara Suleri, and Ashfaq Ahmed have also contributed to this volume.

Real Men Keep Their Word

Tales from Kabul, Afghanistan

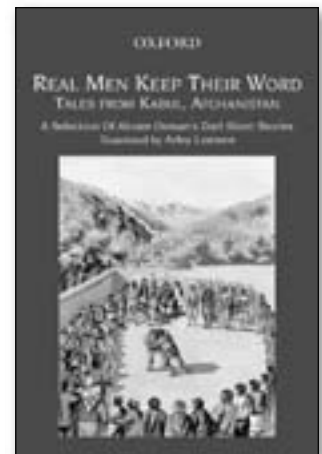

A Selection of Akram Osman's Dari Short Stories

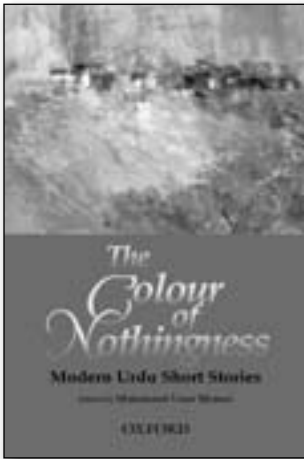

Translated by Arley Loewen

This English translation of Akram Osman's collection of Dari short stories helps us understand traditional Kabul culture, and in effect, Kabul itself. The stories tell us about Afghan heroism and make us laugh at the pretensions of those who clamour for name and fame. They bring to life the popular folk culture of urban Kabul during the mid-twentieth century. The stories will be of interest to the academics interested in modern Afghan studies as well as general readers.

Zamiruddin Ahmad

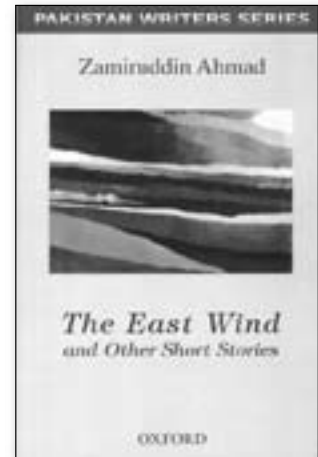

Translated by Shamoos Zamir

Zamiruddin Ahmad was one of the few writers who left a singular and distinctive imprint on Urdu fiction writing. He had a particular insight into the lifestyle, aspirations, and frustrations of Urdu-speaking Muslim families in colonial India and portrays them unerringly and movingly. He also focuses on the new set of cultural and political constrictions faced by them after Partition.

On Air

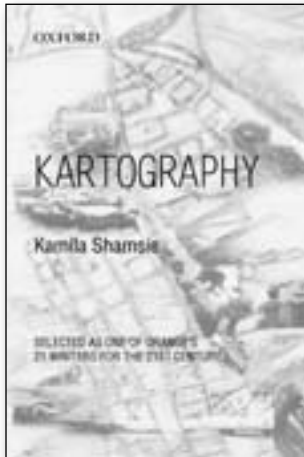

Maniza Naqvi

On Air weaves its plot around the theme of loss, love, desire, and death. The plot unfolds over a six-hour period in which the main character, Naz, tells stories to listeners and callers over the radio on a late night talk show slot. The characters in Naz's stories reflect her own pathologies as she tries to come to terms with her experiences. The subject matter is serious but has been dealt with subtly, in a rather light-hearted manner.

Kartography

Kamila Shamsie

Soul mates from birth, Karim and Raheen are irrevocably bound to one another and to Karachi. As the years go by, they let a barrier of silence build between them until they are brought together during a dry summer of strikes and ethnic violence and their relationship stands poised between strained friendship and fated love. Impassioned and touching, Kartography is a love song to Karachi and in it the author shows us that, whatever happens in the world, we must never forget the complicated war in our hearts.

Salt and Saffron

Kamila Shamsie

Aristocratic and eccentric, the Dard-e-Dil clan has plenty of stories to tell, and secrets to hide. But there is a sting to most tales, for the Dard-e-Dils are cursed by their 'not-quite' twins. Aliya begins to believe that she is another 'not-quite twin' cosmically connected with her aunt Mariam. Mariam Apa mysteriously arrives on the day Aliya is born and never utters a single word, except to dictate the daily menu to Masood the family cook. Food and love collide in the family. Spanning the subcontinent from the Muslim invasions to Partition, this is a magical novel about the shapes stories can take—turning into myths, appearing in history books, and entering our lives.

The Light

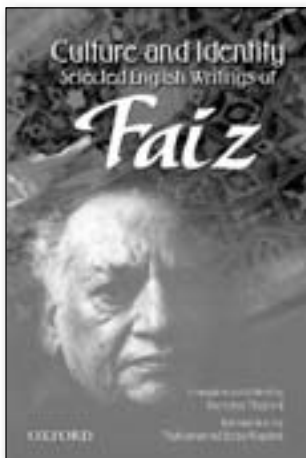

A History of the Movement for Progressive Literature in the Indo-Pakistan Subcontinent

Sajjad Zaheer
Translated by Amina Azfar

Roshnai, the title of the Urdu work of which The Light is a translation, is considered to be the most authentic record of the Progressive Movement that transformed Urdu literature and had an impact on the literatures of many other languages of the subcontinent. It contains fascinating vignettes of famous writers of the time, such as Tagore, Munshi Premchand, Hasrat Mohani, and Faiz Ahmed Faiz. It gives an unforgettable account of the famed first conference of the Progressive Writers' Association, which was chaired by Munshi Premchand.

Culture and Identity

Selected English Writings of Faiz

Compiled and Edited by Sheema Majeed
Introduction by Muhammad Reza Kazimi

This book is the first compilation of the English writings of Faiz Ahmed Faiz, Pakistan's premier poet and author. Apart from many volumes of poetry, Faiz wrote literary criticism and articles on culture in both Urdu and English. Some of his articles in this volume spell out the writer's well-known predilection for the progressive canons of literature. Articles on Amir Khusrau, Ghalib, Tolstoy, Iqbal, and Sadequain figure prominently in the collection as 'applied criticism'. This volume is not only invaluable for shedding light on the literary proclivities of Faiz but also stands on its own as a very candid and original exposition of Pakistani culture and thought.

A History of Radio Pakistan

Nihal Ahmad

This book traces the history of Radio Pakistan from its inception, and provides a detailed and comprehensive account of Pakistan's first-ever nationwide radio service. The author has examined all aspects of radio in Pakistan, including programming, engineering, news and current affairs coverage, as well as its administration and finance. A brief history of broadcasting in general and a chronology of significant events covered by Radio Pakistan, are included for ready reference. The book highlights the role played by the organization in the development of the literary genre, particularly drama and music, with a special focus on classical music and promotion of local dialects and cultures.

The Media and the War on Terrorism

Edited by Stephen Hess and Marvin Kalb

These candid conversations with distinguished journalists and prominent public officials capture the challenges encountered by the media during a crisis such as war. The participants illuminate the struggle to balance freedom of the press with the need to protect sensitive information in the national interest. As the Information Age collides with the War on Terrorism, this challenge becomes even more critical.

The Lost World of Hindustani Music

Kumar Prasad Mukherji

Kumar Prasad Mukherji's elegy to a vanishing age of musical giants comprises many shared experiences between performer and audience, and between recital and applause. It is his salute to a world receding into the shadows of history peopled by ustads, pandits, the rich and the famous, and the sacred and the profane. He traces the origins of their schools from folk traditions to the courts of ancient emperors. He points to the time when notation crept into classical music, resulting in the preservation of ragas that would otherwise have been lost to time.

Sufi Music of India and Pakistan

Sound, Context, and Meaning in Qawwali

Regula Burckhardt Qureshi

This book is a ground-breaking study of cultural performance. Specifically, it is about Qawwali, conventionally understood as the music of Sufism in South Asia. One of the most highly regarded scholars in ethnomusicology, Regula Qureshi comes with a unique set of tools to bear on this study. An anthropologist who has conservatory credentials in Western music, many years of training in Indian music, and complete fluency in Urdu, Qureshi conducted extensive fieldwork for this study in both Pakistan and India, visiting a number of important shrines, and recording numerous Qawwali performances, lessons, interviews, and conversations.

Field Guide to the Small Mammals of Pakistan

T. J. Roberts

This is the first volume in an intended series of Field Guides covering all the mammals and birds of Pakistan, and is one of two volumes covering the mammals. Seventy-eight species are described, with their concise life history accounts, revealing a surprising wealth and variety of smaller-sized mammals. This Field Guide will surely help to create more interest and awareness of the host of tiny animals, which live among us yet remain largely unnoticed.

Field Guide to the Large and Medium-sized Mammals of Pakistan

T. J. Roberts

The second volume in the Field Guide series covers sixty-five species, with life history accounts. During the second half of the twentieth century the author has been able to witness many changes in the natural landscape of the country, which have inevitably resulted in a rapidly dwindling number of all our larger and more spectacular mammals. It is hoped that this Field Guide will create a better awareness of our natural wildlife heritage, which we are so imminently in danger of losing.

New Perspectives on Pakistan

Visions for the Future

Edited by Saeed Shafqat

This multi-author volume is a collection of papers presented at the international conference on Pakistan organized by the Southern Asian Institute, Center of Pakistan Studies, and American Institute of Pakistan Studies, at the Columbia University, in April 2003. The papers included in this volume examine the history, society, and culture of Pakistan from multiple angles. A number of papers offer important and significant shifts from the dominant discourses of Pakistan Studies and set the tone for alternative ways to analyze issues confronting Pakistani society and the state. The volume is inter-disciplinary in spirit and content and brings together the theoretical insights and empirical research on Pakistan in an unprecedented manner.

Life after Partition Migration, Community and Strife in Sindh, 1947–1962

Sarah Ansari

By the 1990s, ethnic politics had come to dominate Sindh, with calls for Karachi to become a fifth province in its own right. This book examines the historical background to these developments by focusing on events in the province in the years immediately following Partition, when migrants from India and local people in Sindh found themselves living alongside each other in the newly created state of Pakistan. How far they retained distinctive notions of community and identity, and what its impact was on processes of accommodation and integration, forms the main focus of this study of life in Sindh between 1947 and 1962.

Alfarabi: The Political Writings 'Selected Aphorisms' and Other Texts

Translated and Annotated by Charles E. Butterworth

Alfarabi was among the first to explore the tensions between the philosophy of classical Greece and that of Islam. His writings, extraordinary in their breadth and deep learning, have had a profound impact on Islamic and Jewish philosophy. This book presents four of Alfarabi's most important texts, making his political thought available to classicists, medievalists, and scholars of religion and Byzantine and Middle Eastern studies.

Alfarabi and the Foundation of Islamic Political Philosophy

Muhsin S. Mahdi

Foreword by Charles E. Butterworth

Muhsin Mahdi distills more than four decades of research to offer an authoritative analysis of the work of Alfarabi, the founder of Islamic political philosophy. Mahdi presents this great thinker as a philosopher who sought to lay the foundations for a new understanding of revealed religion and its relation to the tradition of political philosophy. Mahdi presents a discussion of Islamic philosophy and its historical background and also gives an introduction to the interrelated spheres of philosophy, political thought, theology, and jurisprudence within medieval Islam at the time of Alfarabi.

Ghazali and the Poetics of Imagination

Ebrahim Moosa

A great deal of work has been published on Ghazali, a twelfth century Muslim theologian and legal and ethical thinker, in the English language, but no one has done what Ebrahim Moosa has accomplished: both to historicize and then to analyse Ghazali as a source of creative cross-pollination between medieval and modern Muslim religious thoughts. Moosa intends the book to be a journey of engagement with Ghazali in order to improve our understanding of the past and the future of Islam on the world stage. One of the author's aims in doing this is to illuminate Ghazali's creativity and imagination and to encourage contemporary scholars of Islam to draw inspiration from its most illustrious historical interpreter.

On the Boundaries of Theological Tolerance in Islam

Abu Hamid al Ghazali's Faysal al Tafriqa

Sherman A. Jackson

This is a highly readable, annotated translation of Ghazali's Faysal al Tafriqa. Abu Hamid al Ghazali, arguably one of the most famous Muslim intellectuals in the history of Islam, set out to provide a legally sanitized definition of Unbelief (kufur) as the basis for a criterion for determining who, as far as theology is concerned, is to be considered a Muslim and who is not. The translation is preceded by an extensive commentary in which the author reconstructs the historical and theoretical context of the Faysal and discusses its relevance for contemporary thought and practice.

O City of Lights

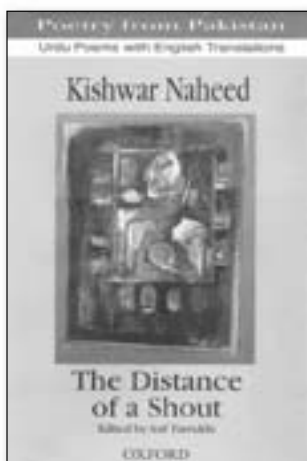

Faiz Ahmed Faiz: Selected Poetry and Biographical Notes

Selected and Edited by Khalid Hasan

Faiz transformed the established theme of individual love into love for humanity and concern for the human condition. Because of his knowledge of, and empathy with, the Persian and Arabic literary tradition, he was able to link it with contemporary Urdu poetry. His scholarship in English literature imbued his work with an international dimension. This volume is made up of translations of Faiz's best work by the late poet and scholar Daud Kamal, and by journalist and literary translator Khalid Hasan. It also contains a prose section based on Faiz's interviews and conversations that epitomize his views on life and literature.

We've Learnt Nothing from History

Pakistan: Politics and Military Power

M. Asghar Khan

The book focuses on the early entry of Pakistan's armed forces into the country's politics and the struggle for the restoration of democracy from 1968 onwards. The author played an important role in this struggle, leading a movement against Ayub Khan that resulted in his ouster, and later, opposing Yahya Khan when he refused to hand over power to Sheikh Mujibur Rahman and the Awami League after they won a clear majority in the 1970 elections. In addition, the author reviews the events that led to the re-entry, in 1999, of the armed forces into politics after a short and turbulent period of 'democracy', and provides some insights into possible political developments in Pakistan in the future.

The Emergence of Bangladesh

Vol. 2: Rise of Bengali Nationalism (1958–1971)

Badruddin Umar

The saga of the birth of Bangladesh continues with Volume 2 of The Emergence of Bangladesh. In this volume, the author focuses on Ayub Khan, Pakistan's first military dictator, and cites the events that led to his downfall. The united state of Pakistan, constituting the western and eastern wings, ended on 16 December 1971 with the surrender of the eastern command of the Pakistan armed forces. The book clearly describes and analyzes these developments, basing the account on available factual documents and eyewitness accounts.

The Pakistan People's Party

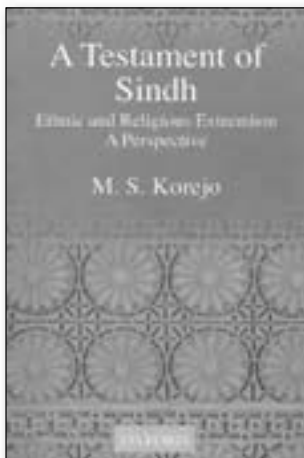

Rise to Power

Philip E. Jones

The book's argument subscribes to the belief that the People's Party was a transitional political organization, in that it reflected both the passing age of elite politics and the new age of mass politics. The book focuses on party formation, factions and organizations. It offers a convincing analysis of the causes of the PPP success in the 1970 elections.

A Testament of Sindh

Ethnic and Religious Extremism: A Perspective

M. S. Korejo

Among the problems facing Sindh today, ethnic militarism, sectarian extremism, and political terrorism have acquired menacing proportions. Ethnic confrontation has reached the dimensions of a mini civil war. Sectarian intolerance has spread panic among peaceful citizens. This book is an attempt to seriously and frankly analyse the current situation of Sindh.

Islam's Political Culture

Religion and Politics in Predivided Pakistan

Nasim Ahmad Jawed

This book examines the political dimensions of Islam in pre-divided Pakistan (1947–1971). The author draws on the findings of a survey he conducted among two influential social groups, the ulama and modern professionals, as well as on the writings of Muslim intellectuals. He probes the major Islamic positions on critical issues concerning national identity, the purpose of the state, the form of government, and free, socialist, and mixed economies.

Khaki Shadows

Pakistan, 1947–1997

General K. M. Arif

This book vividly portrays the role of the army in the politics of Pakistan from its earliest years and how the intermix of political and military forces created difficulties for both and damaged national prestige. The author, who has held important positions during two martial law administrations, gives an insider's account of the intrigues, manipulations and power struggles that engulfed Pakistan and plunged it into an abyss of inefficiency, greed, and corruption.

The Politics of the Jamiat-i-Ulema-i-Islam

Pakistan, 1971–1977

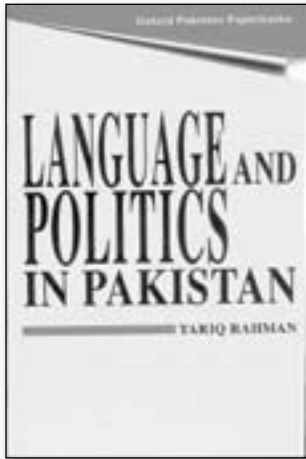

Sayyid A. S. Pirzada

The ulema claim that they stand for an Islamic system of government based on the pattern of the caliphate. This book attempts to analyse this claim by comparing the performance of the religious parties, particularly the JUI with socialist and centrist parties in national politics.

Early Childhood Development From Understanding to Initiatives

Edited by Bilal Iqbal Avan

Childhood is an endearing phase of life for the child as well as for the family. This book points not only to the extensive range of issues involved in the healthy development of a child, but also with the necessary apparatus to deal with these effectively. A unique feature of this book is that explanations have been synthesized from diverse disciplines in order to explain a solitary, consistent framework. The purpose is to create a universal language for thinking, communication, and action regarding Early Childhood Development.

The Labour Movement in Pakistan Organization and Leadership in Karachi in the 1970s

Zafar Shaheed

This book recalls the conditions in which the labour movement was created in Pakistan by documenting workers' organization and action during the 1960s and 1970s. It studies workers, their organization, their leaders, and how they interact with management and the State. Considering both the workplace and the workers' community in Karachi, it sheds new light on labour relations and social policy, within an ethnically diverse setting. This book uncovers milestones in the development of not only the labour movement but also the development of democratic processes and structures.

Valleys in Transition Twenty Years of AKRSP's Experience in Northern Pakistan

Edited by Geof Wood, Abdul Malik, and Sumaira Sagheer

This book is the result of a series of reflective studies conducted by AKRSP (Aga Khan Rural Support Programme) which represented a valuable lens through which to test the viability and efficacy of fashions and approaches to development, as reviewed in the introduction. The authors, a combination of practitioners and thinkers, track the subtleties of change in people's livelihoods through which precarious, near universal subsistence poverty has been exchanged for a much more nuanced and differentiated story of diverging fortunes and opportunities, which have also embraced out-migration.

Decade of the Dacoits

Imdad Hussain Sahito

The dacoits of Sindh are famous for their daring raids, and their capacity to loot, plunder, even murder and kidnap, and disappear swiftly into the jungle hideouts of their forest habitats. During the ten-year period from 1984-1994, the dacoits of Sindh became almost all-powerful, especially in the towns and rural areas of the Province, and the police, even the army, could not contain them. This book traces the history of the dacoits of Sindh, and investigates the origins of the phenomena, and examines the forces that gave impetus to the problem, and even succoured the dacoits in terrorizing the local population with impunity.

Language, Ideology, and Power

Language-learning among the Muslims of Pakistan and North India

Tariq Rahman

This is the first book-length study of the history of language-teaching and learning among South Asian Muslims. It looks at language-teaching policies and texts, analysing how they support certain ideologies and, consequently, certain power structures. It also argues that, in most cases, people learn languages to empower themselves, thereby equipping themselves for powerful jobs.

From Dusk to Dawn

Autobiography of a Pakistan Cricket Legend

Fazal Mahmood

Fazal Mahmood was the first sports legend produced by Pakistan. These memoirs describe the triumphs and tribulations of Pakistan's first cricket team—especially the Oval victory of 1954, when Fazal Mahmood guided Pakistan to its very first test victory against the MCC. The Pakistan side has produced more legendary batsmen than bowlers and this book serves to remind us that Pakistan's first cricket hero was a pace bowler known for his deadly leg-cutters.

A History of the Pakistan Army

Wars and Insurrections

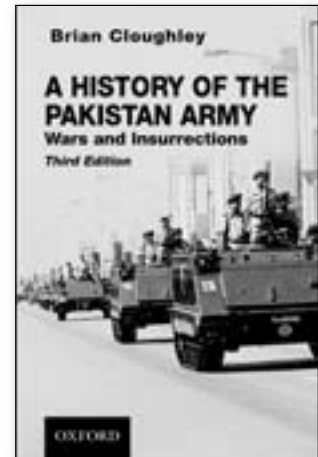

Third Edition

Brian Cloughley

This is an in-depth study of the Pakistan Army. The author describes Pakistan's violent internal politics and erratic international relations in the context of military involvement, with the deep knowledge gained through long association with the country and its armed forces. The most important aspect of this new edition is the chapter which covers the army coup of 1999. There is analysis of the political aspects of the post-coup years, and examination of the army's budget, procurement, capabilities and deployment in support of the US 'War on Terror', notably its campaign in Waziristan in 2004-2005

Historic Battlefields of Pakistan

Johnny Torrens-Spence

This book brings to light eighteen different historic battlefields that lie in modern Pakistan, ranging from ancient times to the late nineteenth century. These battles have left an indelible mark on the culture and history of the people of the region. They included some of the greatest military commanders of all time, such as Alexander the Great, Genghiz Khan, Mahmud Ghaznavi, Ranjit Singh, Sir Charles Napier and Lord Gough. Drawing on his military experience, official military reports, private memoirs and local folk traditions, the author paints a lively description of each battle, with detailed maps.

The 1971 Indo-Pak War A Soldier's Narrative

Major General Hakeem Arshad Qureshi

While the West Pakistanis viewed the 1971 Indo-Pakistan war as a great betrayal by East Pakistan, the Bengalis looked at it as a war of liberation from an oppressive and brutal political system. Even the publication of the Hamood-ur-Rahman Commission Report in 2000 has not removed all the uncertainties. While the political aspects are given proper attention, the focus of the book is on the military resistance of an isolated army.

Intikhab-e-Kalam Akhtar Shirani

This is a short and accessible selection of the poems of Akhtar Shirani, known from the 1930s as the Romantic Poet of Urdu. His poems broke new ground in Urdu and brought in the simplicity and sincerity associated with ancient Arabic poetry, which depicts love and the desert milieu familiar to our poet through his life in Rajasthan. All his contemporaries have been unstinting in their praise of Akhtar Shirani's contribution which has influenced three generations of Urdu poets.

Khurshid ka Samaan-e-Safar She'r-e-Iqbal par kuchh Tehreerayn

Shamsur Rahman Faruqi

Books on Iqbal are legion but very rarely an outstanding literary critic comes up with a book which affords original insight into both the sweep of Iqbal's works and the particular aspects of Iqbal's poetry. This is a work by a brilliant critic, bound to dominate the literary scene for long. Shamsur Rahman Faruqi, who concentrates on stylistic studies and poetic forms, has presented for the first time a separate volume on Iqbal, which follows his earlier works on the stalwarts of Urdu poetry, Mir and Ghalib.

Intikhab-e-Kalam Majaz

Majaz was a poet most representative of his age, struggling for independence as well as seeking social emancipation. His poetry, specially his masterpiece 'Awarah' (Vagabond) characterizes what we came to identify in the 1960s as the 'Angry Young man'. He was an asset to the Progressive Writers Movement as attested by all his contemporaries and comrades. Even today, 50 years after his mysterious death, Majaz exercises a spell over every succeeding generation of poets and critics. This volume showcases a selection of his poetry.

Islam mein Pani ka Intizam

Edited by Faruqi, Biswas, and Bino

In many parts of the world, water is rapidly becoming the key development issue. In such areas, policy makers have often proposed to implement policies without considering local culture or values. Developing an understanding of the Islamic perspective on proposed water management policies in the Muslim regions is a key for sustainable development. This book presents such a perspective.

Tareekh say Kuchh Nahin Seekha Siyasat aur Afwaj-e-Pakistan

M. Asghar Khan

The book focuses on the early entry of Pakistan's armed forces into the country's politics and the struggle for the restoration of democracy from 1968 onwards. The author played an important role in this struggle, leading a movement against Ayub Khan that resulted in his ouster, and later, opposing Yahya Khan when he refused to hand over power to Sheikh Mujibur Rahman and the Awami League after they won a clear majority in the 1970 elections. In addition, the author reviews the events that led to the re-entry, in 1999, of the armed forces into politics after a short and turbulent period of 'democracy', and provides some insights into possible political developments in Pakistan in the future.

Dilli ki Khawateen ki Kahawatayn aur Muhawaray

Shaista Suhrawardy Ikramullah

This is a book recording the peculiar feminine proverbs and idioms of the ladies of Delhi, the cultural capital of Urdu. Had they not been documented, these would have passed into oblivion. Begum Ikramullah lived in Delhi at a time when the zenana idiom was still prevalent. The Preface displays great linguistic insight and the Glossary, painstakingly prepared, is most authentic.

Rafi Peer kay Aath Dramay

Compiled by Tassneem Peerzada

Rafi Peer made a vital contribution to the least developed genre of Urdu literature—the Drama. He was one of the few writers who actually received training in the art of writing and presenting plays in Germany where he lived for twelve years. Upon his return, he joined the All-India Radio. He produced over 600 English, Urdu, and Punjabi dramas which enjoyed immense popularity. In this collection we are presenting his six Urdu and two Punjabi plays.

Kalunk

Heera Mandi ki Darpardah Saqafat

Fouzia Saeed

Translated by Fahmida Riaz

This book is the Urdu translation of Taboo! The Hidden Culture of a Red Light Area. It is a journey of discovery into the infamous red light district of Lahore, Pakistan, known as the Shahi Mohalla (the Royal Bazaar), or Heera Mandi (the diamond market). The phenomenon of prostitution coupled with music and dance performances has ancient roots in South Asia. Regardless of the stigma attached to prostitution, it has given birth for centuries to many well-known performing artists. The book paints a more realistic picture of the phenomenon through the stories of the people living there: the musicians, the prostitutes, and their pimps, managers and customers.

Zindagi ki Yadayn

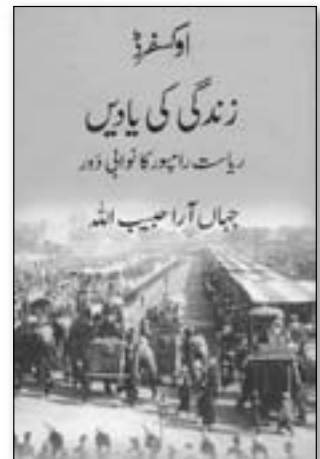

Riyasat Rampur ka Nawabi Daur

Jahanara Habibullah

This book presents a unique and fascinating glimpse of a fabled world. A world of traditions that remained an integral part of Indo-Muslim culture from Mughal times to the partition of the subcontinent. Begum Habibullah's vignettes build up a collage of images that reveal the link between the old and the new. The book spans a lifetime, and in terms of lifestyles and rituals it moves through centuries. It is extensively illustrated by a rare collection of photographs which provides an extraordinary record of costumes and traditions in the early years of the twentieth century.

Parday say Parliament tak

Shaista Suhrawardy Ikramullah

This is a simple but absorbing narrative of a Muslim woman growing up in India at the end of the Raj. The rapidity of change in politics, culture, and thought that marked this period are reflected in the life of this lady, the author of the book. Caught in the middle of this major cultural shift, the protagonist accomplishes what were unimaginable feats for her compatriots. She emerges from purdah and eventually ends up in Parliament. She even gets an ambassadorship to Morocco and is chosen to lead Pakistan's delegation to the UN.

Honour

Crimes, Paradigms, and Violence against Women

Edited by Lynn Welchman and Sara Hossain

Honour brings together the practical insights and experiences of individuals and organizations working in diverse regions and contexts to combat 'crimes of honour'. The book examines strategies of response to such manifestations of violence against women, focusing largely on 'honour killings', forced marriages, and the related use of 'honour' and 'provocation' as a legal defence in Europe, the Middle East, Latin America, and South Asia. This timely book highlights activist and practice-orientated academic perspectives from both the South and the North.

Women and the Fatimids in the World of Islam

Delia Cortese and Simonetta Calderini

This first full-length study on women and the Fatimids is a groundbreaking work investigating an unexplored area in the field of Islamic and medieval studies. The authors have unearthed a wealth of references to the status and influence of women in this period, thus re-inscribing women's role in the history of one of the most fascinating Islamic dynasties —the only one to be named after a woman.

Zina

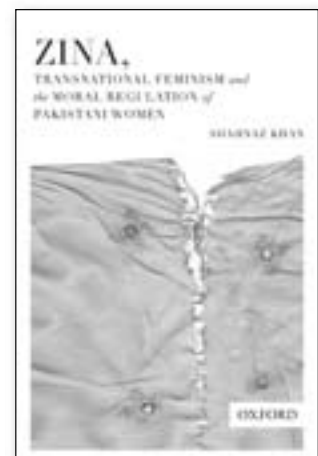

Transnational Feminism and the Moral Regulation of Pakistani Women

Shahnaz Khan

In this study, the author interrogates the Zina (anti-adultery) Ordinance and its implications for Pakistani women. She presents a substantive assessment of what has been occurring because of these laws and argues that the zina laws help situate morality within the individual, thus de-emphasizing the prevalence of societal injustice. The author's original contribution lies in the interviews with women arrested under the Zina Ordinance. She concludes that transnational feminist solidarity can help women identify the linkages between the local and global and challenge oppressive practices internationally.

Contested Representation Punjabi Women in Feminist Debate in Pakistan

Tahmina Rashid

This research brings forth a dynamic way of looking at women's rights activism in Pakistan and how it affects the manner in which women issues are analysed in various state and non-state avenues both at national and international levels. Apart from looking at the legal rights, political representation and socio-economic status of women, it looks at the contested views on the class structure of society and the manner in which women are positioned.

Beyond Honour A Historical Materialist Explanation of Honour Related Violence

Tahira S. Khan

This book is an attempt to look beyond the cultural notion of honour as the main motive behind gender-based violence by examining related issues through historical academic research along with the narration of present day stories of victims around the globe. By focusing on honour related violence in the Muslim world, especially in Pakistan, this study aims to explain the origin and persistence of the honour/shame code by applying Marx's Historical Materialist approach. This historical approach identifies the materialist/economic basis of honour related violence in some societies, and the absence of such violence in others.

No Shame for the Sun Lives of Professional Pakistani Women

Shahla Haeri

This book is based on six candid interviews which introduce readers to a class of professional Muslim women rarely, if ever, acknowledged in the West. These women narrate stories of success and defeat, and of conflicts and compromises with family, kin, and community while facing violence, archaic marriage rules, and locally entrenched codes of conduct.

Taboo!

The Hidden Culture of a Red Light Area

Fouzia Saeed

Foreword by I. A. Rehman

The Islamic injunction against extramarital sex adds to the complexities that prostitution has brought to Pakistani society. The Shahi Mohalla or Royal Locality is the most infamous flesh market of Pakistan which has existed through the centuries. In the process it has left an indelible impression on not only the social consciousness of Pakistan, but also on many arts like dancing and singing. This is a scholarly, yet sympathetic, analysis of an area no one admits to have visited, and which nevertheless flourishes under the eyes of the guardians of law and public morality.
